Morrisites Disappointed at Wesleyville

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—Allow me space first to contradict the statements made in some of the public papers, about Morris' reception at Wesleyville. We can imagine now what a man of this stamp is capable of doing in the shape of political deceit.

I will give you the correct or as near as possible, statement about Sir Edward's reception at Wesleyville. There was quite a crowd on the wharf which generally is when the Prospero arrived, and especially on her first trip in the spring. As she was tying to the wharf, one of our leading men called for cheers for Sir Edward Morris. Three persons responded distinctly, two more in a mumbling manner. I could give you all the names if required. When these few found they were in such a minority, I tell you they felt very small, and you can imagine the feeling of Sir Edward. So ended the gigantic reception of Sir Edward at Wesleyville.

I will give you a little private conversation with one of our leading men when he was comfortably seated in the parlor with Captain—. "What do you think of politics here?" "Now, sir," replied the captain, "I suppose you want me to give you the truth as far as I know. At Wesleyville you may get one-third, and for sure no more than that. In the adjoining settlements from here to Newtown, you will get none at all. At Newtown proper, you may get one-third. At Pool's Island I can't say much about; but I don't think you will do very much."

"Is that so?" asks Sir Edward.

Mr. Editor, that does not look very much like a big reception. You will have to forgive me; I am not giving you about the disappointment of the Morrisites. They thought as the boat arrived in the proper time and was going to lay here for the night that Sir Edward was going to have a public meeting, and tell us about his "making good," what the Herald has been squealing about. But I suppose he was ashamed to walk over the roads here after promising us a carriage road, and leave us worse than we were before. He may come several times and not get as many men home as there was on this occasion. He might have told us that he forgot about the carriage road and the light-house, and why he did not have all the public monies spent through the road boards as he promised to do. Also, why he is giving out so many family grants, and how much one firm here received from his Government and how much that firm was paid for wharfage last summer when the dredge was here, and why it was done when she had two Government wharves to go to; why he is making so much fuss about fish markets and then to allow a combine to beat St. John's to keep down the price; about his little mistake in figuring out the cost of the branch railways; why he is giving Reid so much control in our country, and how he enjoyed his trip which cost us $7,000. He might have asked us if we were going to support his Picnic Party again. But what use for me to ask about these things? The end of the Picnic Party bluff and deceit will soon be over and the quicker the better, for feeding the fat sow is far worse than ever before. I would say more, but I know I have taken too much space already. I suppose some will be saying, this fellow is a Unionist, but this is from one of the Charge of the Light Brigade at The Nickle Theatre.

Manager Kjelley, of the Nickel Theatre, has arranged a programme of especial interest for Empire Day. One of the films will depict that famous charge which was the most sensational of the world's history. The picture is entitled "Victoria Cross," or the story of the Charge of the Light Brigade. It depicts that famous lady whose bravery and tenderness is known to all the fair sex—Florence Nightingale. The film was procured at a great cost and at this time when the patriotism of all is stirred, should prove attractive.

WILL DELIVER ADDRESS.—On Sunday afternoon at the King George the Fifth Institute Mr. Isaac C. Morris will deliver an address on "The Golden Rule." The subject in such capable hands will, no doubt, be done full justice.

A Munich Object-Lesson

Lord Haldane, the Lord Chancellor, has paid a high tribute to the work of Dr. George Kerschenteiner, organizer of continuation schools in the city of Munich, whose work and writings have had so wide an influence in Germany. Lord Haldane said that it was a work which ought to be known better here, and that is indeed true," says Mr. L. G. Chiozza Money, M. P., who gives some useful information in Westminster Gazette as to what is done in Munich.

Compulsory Education Schools.

"In Germany," he says, "there is rapidly spreading the compulsory continuation school system, which ensures the proper induction of the child into the responsibilities of life. I say ensure advisedly, for it is the extraordinary fact that to-day in Munich all but a few hundred of the boys are accounted for in the compulsory continuation schools. If we compare Munich with, say Manchester, we have a striking and significant contrast between two cities of almost equal size, the one of which is training all its youth, while the other is leaving nearly all its youth untrained.

At School Until Eighteen.

"Under the Kerschenteiner system the boys of Munich are trained until eighteen years of age. Compulsory whole-time elementary education is continued until fourteen years of age, and for four years longer the child remains a continuation scholar. Towards the close of his elementary-school training the boy begins to combine practical with theoretical work, if I may be pardoned for suggesting by the use of such terms the false distinction which is so commonly made between theory and practice. Upon leaving the elementary school at fourteen, and passing to the trade which he has chosen, he becomes a compulsory continuation scholar, and is instructed by experts in his particular calling, while also continuing his general education.

"In Munich the continuation school is a beautiful building, which it is an education in itself to work in. I thought of one of the Munich continuation schools the other day when I stood half-paralyzed by the hideous vulgarities of the interior of our Victoria and Albert Museum. From the electric light fittings to the door-handles the Munich continuation school building is a credit to one of the most beautiful cities in the world. The continuation schools embrace classes for all the trades of Munich. There are over fifty distinct manual training classes, equipped with everything that science can provide. Let me give one illustration to show how thoroughly the thing is done.

"They make linoleum among other things at Munich, and when we went to the linoleum classroom, we saw small tables covered with anatomical models. What had these to do with linoleum? The answer is that the students were being taught the meaning of their bodies, and the laws of health, that they might protect themselves from the dangers attached to the making of linoleum. When I saw this concrete example of German thoroughness and German common sense, my mind flew back to a recent instance in this country, in which shown in evidence that men working in a terrible dangerous trade refused to protect their own lives, so ignorant were they.

School for School.

"Two keels to one," they say about the Navy. Is it two much to ask for 'school for school'?"

Mr. Chiozza Money has himself introduced every year since 1908 a Continuation Schools Bill based on the main features of the Munich system. Mr. Pease told the Commons the other evening that only 13 per cent. of the boys between 14 and 17 attended continuation schools. And in London of 30,000 boys who leave school yearly only 25 per cent. find work in skilled trades, and 70 per cent. of the casual dockers on the Thames are Londoners. Mr. Pease's own facts show what can be done in the way of teaching trades. Pupils on leaving existing trade schools, he says, can always obtain good places and good wages. London has room for 20 more such schools, and the Government grant is to be raised from £2 17s. to £5 per scholar.

DIANA FOR ARCTIC.—We hear that the s.s. Diana has been chartered by a party of American scientists in charge of Dr. McMillan to go north. They will go there for a three years' stay in the Arctic. An effort will be made to locate Crocker Land, seen and named by Peary in 1906 and the Diana will return after putting the party ashore somewhere near Cape Sabine.

HAVING GOOD EFFECT.—The attention to the wanton destruction going on in the city which the Telegram's article on this matter brought about, has had a good effect. We learn from the police department that during the week not one report for wilful destruction of property has been made. It is to be hoped that this excellent condition of affairs will be perpetuated.

Rossley Giving Away Empire Souvenirs.

There is a great show at Rossley's and last night was another record one. The Lorraine Buchanan Company is a fine combination and last night the large and enthusiastic audience enjoyed both acts immensely. The Wooden Wedding is a dainty little comedy full of laughs. The part played by Miss Buchanan of an extravagant wife, inviting so many people to her fifth wedding ceremony, to show off before a woman she hates and the ruse on the husband's part, to try and cure her of her extravagance, is a splendid piece of acting. The singing of Billy Devans brought him storms of applause. Then Coca and Beall in their act Levenski's first Lesson, is one laugh all through. There is enough variety to please all. To-night everybody entering the Star Theatre will be presented with a beautiful souvenir in honor of Empire Day and to-morrow each child will also receive a little memento in honor of the Glorious Twenty-Fourth. There is a fine programme for Saturday. Billy Devans sings "The Veteran," a song that will be well worth the price of admission alone. Don't forget the souvenirs will be given to-night and to-morrow at Rossley's.
