

GILLETTS PERFUMED LYE. THE CLEANLINESS OF SINKS, CLOSETS, BATHS, DRAINS, ETC. IS OF VITAL IMPORTANCE TO HEALTH.

Stella Mordant, The Cruise of the "Kingfisher."

CHAPTER XV. "My Dear Rath,—I know that you will be glad to hear that I am quite well. I should like to say also that I am quite happy; but I find that I miss the island and you very much. It is very cold and wet and foggy here in England, and I think of the times you and I used to sit in the sun, looking at the beautiful sea all green and glittering, and the sky all blue; and how kind and good you always were to me. And oh, Rath! though I am back in the big world again, I often wish myself back with you and the cows and the chickens, fishing and shooting and cooking the dinner. I hope you are quite well and happy, and don't miss me very much. Of course, I want you to miss me a little, but not to be unhappy. And I hope you remember your promise when we parted: That you wouldn't forget me while you could help it, and that you wouldn't fall over the cliff again or be reckless in any other way. "Your loving mate, STELLA."

Dry Irritating Hack Of Bronchitis Instantly Relieved By "Catarrhzone"

No Failure, Cure In Every Case Treated By Catarrhzone. Catarrhzone can't fail to cure Bronchitis; its so healing, soothing and balsamic that every trace of the disease flies before it. When you inhale the pure piney vapor of Catarrhzone, you send healing medication to the spots that are diseased and sore. Isn't it rational to apply medicine where the disease exists? Certainly! and that's why Catarrhzone is so successful; it goes where the trouble really is, gets where a spray or ointment can't penetrate. For the relief and complete cure of bronchitis, asthma, catarrh, throat trouble, we guarantee Catarrhzone in every case. You don't take medicine—you don't take drowsy drugs—just breathe the balsamic essences of Catarrhzone; it

She was about to tear it up, but he took it from her gently. "It is a very good one, I should think," he said, quietly, and with such restraint that not a note indicated his suffering. He folded the paper into a small square, and put it in his breast-pocket. "Oh, you will soon be able to write as good a one if you are as quick as you are at your reading," she said, with sudden and suspicious cheerfulness; and she swept her hands across her eyes swiftly, as if to brush a tendrill of her soft hair from them; but her hand was moist after the action. "Now, you begin by making strokes like that. See?"

"It seems easy enough," he said; "but, needless to say, his imitation was crooked and zigzag. "The pencil's so small," he apologized. "It's your hand that's so big," she retorted. "No, it isn't, Rath. It's a long hand, but it's not big—for a man's; at least, I think not. And you needn't hold the pencil as if it were a dagger," she added, as he had progressed to pothooks and hangers. "See, like this. Oh, you stupid! Here, let me guide your hand."

She put hers over it, and the warm fingers closed over his in a soft embrace. "That's better."

He paused in the middle of a line and reflectively regarded the hand which guided his. "What a small hand you've got, Stella!" he remarked. She drew it away quickly, and, holding it before her, regarded it critically. "It's a pity it's so small," he observed; "that is why you can't hold things properly. But it's—it's pretty, somehow, like a bird's claw."

"It's like nothing of the sort," she retorted, indignantly. "A bird's claw, indeed! Go on with your lesson, please, and never mind my hand."

"Guide me again," he said. "I can do it much better when you are helping me that way."

But she would not. "You must learn to do it without guiding," she said, severely. "That's a little better; and I really think you will learn to write presently."

After a pause, he said: "Yes; but I don't see the use of it. I shan't want to write any letters, Stella."

"Well?" she asked, as if awakening from a reverie, though her eyes had been fixed on his painful efforts on the stony road of calligraphy. "Did you mean what you wrote in that letter to me, or was it only make believe?"

A faint color rose to her face, but she said, indifferently: "What was it? I forget now what I wrote."

"That you would miss me when you had gone away; that you were happy here on this island."

"Your loving mate, STELLA." She read this at first laughingly; but as she went on, the laughter died out of her voice, her eyelids quivered, her eyes grew moist, and her breath came rather unevenly.

And Rath sat and listened, his hands clasped loosely at the beginning, but gripping each other tightly towards the end. He did not know what was the matter, what ailed him; but there was a dull, aching pain in his heart which made him catch his breath. Did she know that she was inflicting such pain by this artless letter? As she did not look up she did not see his face, and he uttered no word and made no sign of the agony which rent him. When she had finished, she said: "There! That's the letter."

ULCERS & OLD SORES. If you have an ulcer, an old sore, or some chronic skin trouble, your best course is to try Zam-Buk. See offer below of free trial box! We are content to let Zam-Buk prove itself. Mrs. E. J. Dubois, Vancouver, writes:—"My mother suffered with ulcers on her feet which made it impossible for her to get about. She had doctors' advice and treatment, but the ulcers got no better. We were advised to try Zam-Buk. After a few weeks' use my mother was able to walk. Perseverance with Zam-Buk completely and permanently cured her."

trout or the skins for the Indians; as if it were not worth while living. You said in that letter that I was not to forget you if I could help it; but I am afraid I shall not be able to help it. With you it will be different. You will be in the great world you talk of, and will have plenty of people to talk to and live amidst, but I shall be quite alone again. You see, I have only you, Stella."

While he had been speaking, the girl's heart had responded like a harp whose strings are swept by an ignorant and inexperienced hand. Unseen by him, her colour came and went; but at the last words her face went pale, her lips quivered, and the long lashes hid the tell-tale tears in her eyes. Instinctively her hand stole out to him to touch him with a woman's consoling touch; for when a girl's heart is throbbing with pity and sympathy her fingers itch to express it. But something, of which she knew nothing, held her back. She drew her hand from him before it came in contact with his bare arm, and she said in a voice which, because of her effort to control it, sounded cold and indifferent: "I must go now. I can't leave my mother any longer. She is not well."

He looked up at her gravely, as she stood beside him, tall and graceful as one of the Indian girls who sometimes accompanied the braves to the island. "What is the matter with her?" he asked. Her face was turned away from him as she answered: "I don't know. She is weak, and— and takes no interest in anything. And she eats so very little—I am hungry all day—and she scarcely speaks."

"There is some medicine in the cupboard by the bed," he said. "I know; but she will not take any. She lies back in the chair all day as if she were half asleep; but I know that she is not sleeping, for I see her lips move, and sometimes hear her murmur some words."

He nodded solemnly. "It is as my father was before he died."

"Rath!" she cried, "you don't think that—that she is going to die?"

He regarded her with pity in his dark eyes. "I hope not. But, Stella, why are you so frightened? Death is but sleep—my father said—sleep and rest. And you would not be alone as I was. I am here!"

She looked at him enigmatically for a moment, then turned away. When she had gone, Rath took out the "specimen" letter, and tried to decipher it; but he could not do so. It did not matter, for he had it by heart.

DOCTORS ADVISE OPERATIONS

Saved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

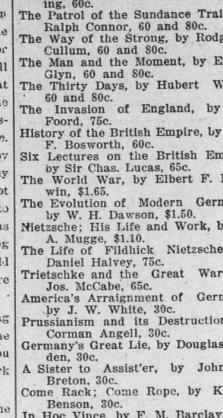

Swarthmore, Penn.—"For fifteen years I suffered untold agony, and for one period of nearly two years I had hemorrhages and the doctors told me I would have to undergo an operation, but I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am in good health now. I am all over the Change of Life and cannot praise your Vegetable Compound too highly. Every woman should take it at that time. I recommend it to both old and young for female troubles."—Mrs. EMILY SUMMERSGILL, Swarthmore, Pa. Canadian Woman's Experience: "Fort William, Ont.—"I feel as if I could not tell others enough about the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was weak and tired and I could not rest nights. A friend recommended your Compound and I soon gained health and strength and could not wish to sleep better. I know other women who have taken it for the same purpose and they join me in praising it."—Mrs. Wm. A. BUFFY, 631 South Vicker Street, Fort Williams, Ontario. Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, is it not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering in a like manner?"

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (conditional) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Evening Telegram Fashion Plates.

The Home Dressmaker should keep a Catalogue Scrap Book of our Pattern Cuts. These will be found very useful to refer to from time to time.

1297.—A NEW AND PLEASING STYLE FOR MOTHER'S GIRLS.

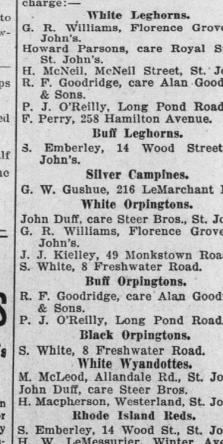

Girl's Dress with Suspender Belt, and with Sleeve in Either of Two Lengths.

This model is very attractive for combinations of material, and will make a delightfully cool and simple dress for warm weather. The waist has a yoke portion over the front, and a collar that may be rolled low or in high flare style, "just like mothers."

The skirt may be joined to the waist, and the suspender belt may be omitted, or the skirt may be finished separately, and the skirt stitched or buttoned to the belt. For embroidered crepe, or voile, chaille, lawn, dimity, or batiste, cashmere or taffeta, the design is very appropriate. The waist may be of crepe, crepe de chine, tulle, lawn or batiste. The Pattern is cut in 4 sizes; 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. It requires 2 1/2 yards for the gimpes, and 2 3/4 yards for the dress, of 27 inch material, for a 6 year size.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.

1286.—A STYLISH YOUTHFUL MODEL.

Among the many and varied styles of this season, there seems none more comfortable and simple, than the blouse style here shown. It has the new full skirt, and new long sleeve. The neck edge is cut in a "V" outline in front, and may be finished with or without the "dickey." The collar is cut in a new and pleasing shape. Blue serge would be nice for this dress, with a finish of machine stitching, or braiding and with a facing of black tulle on the collar. The Pattern is cut in 4 sizes; 14, 16, 17 and 18 years. It requires 5 1/2 yards of 44 inch material for a 16 year size. A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.
