

These Quicker Shaves Mean Younger Faces

Ordinarily, shaving ages the skin—adds years to a man's looks. By giving them a shaving cream soothing to the skin we wiped years from millions of men's faces.

At the same time we cut down shaving time for them.

We spent 18 months—made 130 experiments—perfecting a cream with 5 distinct advantages:

It softens any beard in one minute—without rubbing-in.

Multiples itself 250 times in rich lather. Lather lasts, if necessary, 10 minutes—doesn't dry away.

Strong-walled bubbles hold hairs erect—for easier cutting.

And the after-effect is lotion-like—skin-soothing.

That's why millions of men today use PALMOLIVE SHAVING CREAM. We ask you to try it at our expense. Test for yourself the truth of our claims.

Youthful Rancher Visits His Vast Hawaiian Estate.

Honolulu.—(A.P.)—The high cost of living is one thing that need not cause much worry for the next year, says ten-year-old Richard Smart, who is now on his annual visit to his domain, the great Parker ranch of almost 300,000 acres on the island of Hawaii.

On the petition of his grandmother and guardian, Mrs. Elizabeth Knight, who was Mrs. John Parker before her second marriage, Judge John Desha, of Honolulu has just increased the youngster's annual allowance from $9,000 to $15,000. This sum is divided as follows—general maintenance, education, upkeep of automobile and employment of nurse, governess and chauffeur, $12,000; provision for annual gifts to employees of the Parker ranch, $1,800; special fund for his annual vacation in Hawaii, $2,500.

Few American boys attaining their majority will control the wealth that lies in store and is piling up for young Smart. He will be a multi-millionaire, with an annual income of more than $200,000, and the ownership of the ranch, one of the largest and finest in the world, which is estimated to be worth between $3,000,000 and $5,000,000.

The ranch has played a prominent part in island history and was one of the few places in the territory which did not pay homage to "king sugar." In the early days of the huge estate, life was as wild and care-free as on any cattle ranch in the mainland West. The Hawaiian cowboys were considered of the finest in the world and took many trophies and prizes at mainland rodeos.

Most of Richard's time is spent upon the mainland, chiefly on the Pacific coast, but his annual visit to the ranch is marked by a huge celebration, rodeo and barbecue in which the countryside participates. It is at this time that his gifts to his employees are distributed.

Sleepy Authors.

CELEBRITIES WHO HATED EARLY RISING.

Many years ago a man named Buckland wrote a book entitled "Letters on the Importance, Duty, and Advantages of Early Rising, addressed to the Heads of Families, the Lover of Nature, the Man of Business, the Student, and the Christian."

The book ran into a first edition. But by the time that edition had appeared its author was dead. He died at the age of twenty-five. Poor Buckland! He had performed the "duty" of early rising, but had failed to reap any of its "advantages."

It seems certain that success in letters is by no means the invariable reward of application to work in the early hours of the morning. Most great authors have cherished a pardonable fondness for their beds. We find, for instance, Alfred de Musset writing to a friend: "I generally sleep till two, and sometimes till five in the afternoon, when I have boxed the ears of the night."

Broken Resolutions.

Dr. Johnson, too, made short work of this "early to bed, early to rise" fetish. "Whoever thinks of going to bed before twelve is a scoundrel," he said on one occasion.

Johnson, however, had qualms. He was always intending to get up early in the morning, but never, apparently, succeeded in carrying his intentions into effect.

On March 28th, 1762, he enters in his journal a resolution "to rise early." The same resolution is repeated on the Easter Eve of 1764. Later in the year the following pathetic entry occurs: "To rise early; not later than six, if I can; I hope sooner, but as soon as I can." But the ingrained habits of years proved too strong.

James Thomson, the poet of "The Seasons," was a notoriously late riser. It is true that he was often up at dawn; but this, as his friend Robertson has pointed out, was because he had not been to bed. D'Annunzio, too, is one of those writers who find a morning a bed a source of inspiration.

The advocates of early rising can claim John Wesley as one of their adherents. Wesley generally began his day's work at about five o'clock, and once he preached a sermon on "The Duty and Advantage of Early Rising"—thereby anticipating the unfortunate Mr. Buckland.

But in the case of Wesley there may have been domestic reasons for the exercise of this unattractive virtue. "If I had been married to Mrs. John Wesley," said the Rev. W. L. Watkinson, "I should have been in my study by four o'clock in the mornings."

Napoleon was at one time a consistently early riser, but towards the end of his life he repented of his folly.

On the other hand, it has to be admitted that many men of genius have been addicted to the early-rising habit. Maeterlinck is an early riser, so, too, were Goethe, Tolstoy, Victor Hugo, Anthony Trollope, the Duke of Wellington, and the late Lord Northcliffe.

BILLY'S UNCLE

—AND HOW FITTING IT SEEMS TO HAVE SENT THEM OVER BY THAT SWEET LITTLE CHUBBY-CHEEKED BOY!

Wise Tongues.

Upon the principle that few things are wholly bad when used intelligently, much may be said in praise of flattery. Rigid moralists are too prone to condemn all those pretty speeches and graceful compliments which may be classed as "unnecessary."

In the first place, who shall decide what praise is justly merited and how much? One does not pause to measure, drop by drop, the oil which one puts upon a machine to ensure smooth running; and politeness has been wisely called the machine oil of every-day life.

Strictly speaking, the finished politeness with which well-bred people avoid the open expression of their likes and dislikes out of consideration for the feelings of others is flattery judiciously applied.

The person who never misses an opportunity to say pleasant things, to pay little attentions, who devotes some brains, much good will, and yet more patience to the business of making other people satisfied with themselves, always gets along in life.

Of course one may overdo it. Fulsome flattery overreaches itself and disgusts sensible people, but this does not alter the fact that those who think the best and see only the good and proclaim it are they who make life pleasant for themselves and others.

Demand for Wheat Greater Than Supply.

The world demand for wheat is outpacing the supply, according to a preliminary report on world consumption issued by the International Institute of Agriculture. The report indicates that even if Russia re-enters the grain market this year, Canadian wheat growers may look with confidence to the future. The report's consumption statistics cover only European countries, but the conclusions are reinforced by the general law of diminishing returns which is in operation in Canada, United States, and Argentina, the great wheat-producing countries. Twenty European countries are shown to have a present yield of 25,000,000 tons and to be eating 45,000,000 tons. This is an increased deficiency of about 7,000,000 tons since the pre-war years, or more than Canada's surplus. There is the additional fact that some countries like Poland, which have been forced to rely on home-grown
