The Locarno Pact

"They are mutual guarantees between all the contracting parties with no direction against any third or any other party. They are wholly pacific from beginning to end.

"Moreover, they are bound up closely and indissolubly with the League of Nations, and this alone, with the addition of Germany to that body, will enormously strengthen and enhance the power of that League and is one step forward to the day when the League may be what its creators intended it to be—representative of the nations of the world."—Mr. Baldwin.

"The Treaties would prepare the way for a reduction of armaments. If they produced a sense of security reduced armaments would follow, and it would not even require another conference to bring them about."—Viscount Grey.

"The real test—and it will be what President Wilson, in a memorable phrase once called the acid test, of the reality of this process, which has been going on with the hopes and sympathies of the whole civilized world—will be the attitude of the different Powers on disarmament."—The Earl of Oxford.

"Two years ago the Ruhr struggle was at its height; M. Poincaré, resolved apparently on the disintegration of Germany, seemed irremovable in France, and his political opponents hardly dared to challenge his policy. We began to doubt whether, there was such a thing as Liberal France. We know now that our doubts were false.

"Only this year, the election of Hindenburg as President of the German Reich came to dash an ascent hopes. Was Germany about to sink back into sour irreconcilability? Or was there a measure of reasonableness and goodwill beneath the forbidding aspect of German Nationalism? We have the answer now.

"Above all, British policy seemed till the other day to lack imagination, steadiness and grasp. We have read on now to the pros and cons of our Foreign Secretary, and amid the chorus of congratulations to Mr. Chamberlain, Mr. Baldwin's part should be remembered.

"For it was he, if current reports were well-founded, who at the critical moment held the Cabinet to the right course, by resisting alike Mr. Chamberlain in his desire to placate France for the loss of the Protocol by a one-sided military alliance and the isolationists in their desire to be quit of Europe."

Mr. Austen Chamberlain's View.

"We were able without great difficulty to come to agreements, not only in regard to the situation in the west but also in regard to the situation in the east; agreements which do not indeed make war impossible—no human undertaking or human foresight can do that—but which render war infinitely less probable than it would otherwise have been, for the nation which disturbed the peace of content made at Locarno would draw down upon it the execration of the world," said Mr. Chamberlain in a speech to the Press at the Foreign Office. He added:—

"And nothing since my return has given me greater satisfaction than to see how the work of the nations represented at Locarno is welcomed by the rest of the world. There have in the past been many international agreements and alliances.

"I am not sure that this is not the first of comparable character of which it could be truly said, and is almost universally felt, that while it gives security to those immediately concerned, while it reconciles old enemies without impairing old friendships, yet that it threatens no one; but helps to create peace and security."

"The sequel to Locarno is, or ought to be, inevitable. It can be expressed in one word—disarmament. That is the next step," says the Spectator. "After the Disarmament Conference at Washington France discovered certain reasons which, in her opinion, justified her in watering down the effect of the Agreement.

"She increased instead of reducing her submarines. Besides, it is well known that she and her Allies have been spending more money on armaments than before the war. This policy is the fruit of fear. If the Locarno Treaty is signed fear will be allayed. It can hardly be disputed that the way will then be clear not merely to return to the Washington Conference but to enlarge its provisions both by land and sea.

Disarmament—The Next Step.

"The objection will be raised that the world is 'not yet ready' and so on. Such objections have been raised to every one of those new ideas which from time to time have transformed the world. Somebody has said that the first stage in the treatment of a new or revolutionary idea is to declare that it is 'impossible.' The second stage is to say that it is 'contrary to Scripture.' The third stage—when the idea has justified itself—is to say, 'We always told you so.'

"For our part we are not at all prepared to go on ruining ourselves in order to be ready for extermination."

This terse summoning up of the Conference at Locarno by the Westminster Gazette may be useful to our readers. The Conference arranged:—

"Treaty between Germany, Belgium, France, Britain, and Italy.

"Arbitration Convention between Germany and Belgium."

"Arbitration Convention between Germany and France."

"Arbitration Treaty between Germany and Poland."

"Arbitration Treaty between Germany and Czechoslovakia."

"Of these the first is the most important. It is the Treaty of Mutual Guarantees, and is accompanied by an official commentary.

"This declares that the Security Pact guarantees the inviolability of the frontiers between Germany and Belgium, and Germany and France, cannot be altered. The signing in London on December 1 will thus be a mere formality."—Public Opinion.

Premature Old Age of Women

It is no secret that so many women suffer from ailments peculiar to their sex. Dark circles appear under the eyes, a pale, drawn, haggard expression to the countenance, and the weakness which accompanies such ailments is evidenced by the lagging step, headaches, backache and nervous conditions. Every woman who is afflicted in this way should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which for half a century has been overcoming some of the most stubborn ailments of women.

MUTT AND JEFF THE LITTLE FELLOW MEETS A BILLION AIRESS IN ROME.

By Bud Fisher

JEFF, THERE'S THE AUSTRIAN HEIRESS I SPOKE ABOUT TO YOU! HER FORTUNE MAKES ROCKEFELLER LOOK LIKE A POOR PIKER! SHE'S A BILLIONAIRESS! FLASH SOME FAST WORK AND GRAB HER!

SHE AIN'T MUCH ON LOOKS BUT SHE'D MARRY A BUZZARD FOR A BILLION!

CHEERIO, MISS SKOWFF! I BELIEVE OUR MUTUAL FRIEND MISTER MUTT SPOKE TO YOU ABOUT ME!

QUITE SO! CHAWMED TO MEET YOU MISTER JEFF.

THEY TELL ME YOU'RE ONE OF THE WEALTHIEST MAIDENS IN AUSTRIA. I TRUST THIS IS NO IDLE RUMOR!

IT IS TRUE. MY FORTUNE IS ESTIMATED TO BE ONE BILLION FOUR HUNDRED THOUSAND AND SIXTY SEVEN KRONEN!

1,000,400,067 KRONEN! LET'S SEE! THAT'S EQUAL TO TWENTY ONE THOUSAND LIRE OR NINE THOUSAND ONE HUNDRED FRANCS!

QUITE SO! YOU'RE GOOD AT FIGURES!

AND ON THE OTHER HAND IT AMOUNTS TO THIRTY SEVEN POUNDS! OR IN AMERICAN MONEY IT IS ABOUT ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTY DOLLARS AND FIFTY SIX CENTS!

QUITE SO!

PARDON ME, BUT I HAVE A LUNCHEON ENGAGEMENT! I'M LATE NOW!
