
POTATOES.

Potatoes, like people, require attention as they grow old. For instance, the lacket of a new potato is so thin that scarcely any effort is required to remove it. The skin of an old potato, on the other hand, often presents knots and furrows that must be removed even though the potato itself suffers in consequence. Old potatoes are better if allowed to soak a while in cold water, before boiling, and the addition of a spoonful of salt to the water in which they are boiled, has a tendency to render them less sooggy.

As soon as a fork will enter potatoes easily, remove them from the stove, and if they are old, sprinkle a little salt over them, and take the dish to the door or window and shake it gently. This will render them mealy. We have seen old potatoes so delighted with this treatment, that their jackets have fairly burst, showing the white, mealy surface beneath. When this happens, as it always does if the potatoes are still always does if the potatoes are still always are sit always does if the potatoes are still always does if the potatoes are still remove the pulp and one small pleces with a spoon. II. At the staircase leading to his rooms he paused to take breath, and for the first time the absurdity of his conduct struck him in its practical light. To take fright at the figure of a harmless pedestrian whose way had chanced to lie in the same direction as his own was indeed a comical circumstance.

HEALING A BROKEN LEG.

The proceedings of the Royal Society of England were not taken so seriously a hundred and fifty years ago as they are now. A sailor who had broken his leg sent to the Royal Society an account of the remarkable manner in which he had healed the fracture. His story was that he had dressed it with nothing but tar and oakum, and in three days was able to walk just as well as before the accident. This remarkable story naturally caused some excitement among the members of the society. No one had previously suspected tar and oakum of possessing pected tar and oakum of possessing the society. Wonder that Boers numbering a thousand or more can get within striking distance for an effective rush at night without being seen by our patrols is natural enough to those who do not know what Boer methods of scouting are.

A great many soldiers have learnt the game by long experience, and can play it off against their wily adversaries to some purpose. Others, however, ate mere children at it, and will not be safe from surprises until
