As Margaret's voice died away, Raby turned his sightless face to her.

"You may give it back to me, Margaret, but stay, there is the copy of your answer! I think I would like to hear that once again; and Margaret obediently opened the thu, folded paper.

"My roon Barling—At last we have heard from you—at last you have yielded to my urgent request for some news of your daily lite. God bless you for lifting a little of the weight off us, for telling us something about yourself and your work. I could not help crying bitterly over your letter, to think that a humble roof shelters our child; that yeu are compelled to work for your living; you, Crystal, who have never known what it is to want anything; upon whom a rough wind was not suffered to blow. My child, come home. What need is there of penance and expiation when all has been forgiven? The evil spirit that tormented our child has been cast out, and you are clothed afresh and in your right mind now; come home, for dear Raby's sake, and be his darling as of old! Do you know how he longs for you? Daily le asks 'Any news of her, Margaret?' and last night, as I was passing his study door, he called me in and bade me give you this message—"Pell my child, Margaret, he said, 'that every night I bless her and fall asleep breathing her name; tell her that my forgiveness and blessing are ever with her; that there is no bitterness in my heart; that she cannot eseape from my love; that it will follow her to the world's end. And tell her, Margaret, that if she do not soon come back to me that I, Raby—blind, help-less, useless as I am, will seek her through God's earth till I find her and brigh her her has and her and bright and hersh work of the read of the plant letter, to think that a number root sneewer car child; that you are compelled to work for your living; you, Crystal, who have never know what it is to want anything; upon whom a rough wind was not suffered to blow. I have seen her look at Mona so strangely when you were talking to her; and once she asked me if you admired fair women, and if you did not think Mrs. Grey very beautiful; and when I said yos, I remember she turned very pale, and did not answer."

"I never thought of this," he returned, in a tone of grief. "It must have been one of her sick fancies, poor unhappy child—as though my heart had ever swerved from her for an instant. What do you think, Margaret, could she care for the blind man still?"

cvents do not always cast their shadow before; that we lik down to rest in happy gloorance of what the next day may bring forth. As Margaret fooked out on the monlight that evening, she little thought that Sunday was the last day of her happy girlhood—that the morrow held a bitter trial is store for her.

She was sitting alone in the morning to the next afternoon, when Sir Wilfred and the next monet. A faint blush read the next monet. A faint blush read the next monet. They wist may be supposed to the cold man counced, and the next monet. A faint blush read the next monet. They wist may recognition of her as his sort flatter was almost a stranger to her. He was a man or reserved habits, who had never been very sociable with his neighbors, and Margaret had seen little of him in her girlish days.

"It is very good of you to come so soon, Sir Wilfred," she said, blushing still more rosily under his penetrating glance. "I am sorry my brother is out; he has gone over to Pierrepoint."

"I came here to see you and not your bother," returned Sir Wilfred, and here so see you and not your bother," returned sir Wilfred; she did not look at her as he spoke, and Margaret hoved her head, She thought Sir Wilfred's manner rather slingular—he had met her with coldness, there was certainly no trace of warmth, no cordiality in the looked older than he had done yesterday, and there Zas a harassed expression in his face. "It is rather strange," he went on, "that Hugh should have left me in ignorance all these months, but that"—as Nargaret seemed about to speak—"is between me and him, I do not include yout in the looked older than he had done yesterday, and there Zas a harassed expression in his face. "I do not understand—"

"I do not understand—"
"Perhaps not, and it is my painful task to enlighten you, Miss Ferrers," he hesitated a little, "I do not wonder at my son's choice, now I see you; I am quite sure that you are all he represents you to be; that in all respects you are fitted to be the wife of a wealthier man than Hugh. But for my boy's sake I am compelled to appeal to your generosity, your sense of right, and ask you to give him up."
"I can not give your son up," returned Margaret, with noble frankness; "I am promised to him, and we love each other dearly."

What Does It Mean? What Does It Mean?

"100 Doses One Dollar" means simply that Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most economical medicine to buy, because it gives more for the money than any other preparation. Each but the contains 100 doses, and will, average to last a month, while other preparations, taken according to directions, are gone in a week. Therefore, be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla, the best blood purifier.

"More than ever, dear. If I know Crystal, her heart has belonged to you from a child."

There speaks my comforter"—with one of his rare smiles; "you are always good to me, Madge. Now read to me a little, and let me banish these weary thoughts. One little plew—one faint hint—and I would keep my word and seek for her; but, as you say, we must have patience a little longer," and Raby straightened himself and composed himself to listen, and they sat there until the evening sunshine began to creep about the sun-dial, and it was time for Raby to walk over to Pierrepoint. It is well for some of us that coming Monthly Prizes for Boys and Girls.
