London, Tuesday, Oct. 2. The market was well attended today both by farmers and buyers and business was fairly active. Attended as It was by most delightful weather, the task of marketing was a very delightful one.

The offerings of dairy produce, while not lavish, were sufficient for all needs, Butter was supplied quite plentifully, and was in fair demand. Prices in this line, as in others, had resumed the normal, from which they had dropped with Saturday's rain. changes were noted today. This might also be said of eggs, which were supplied in adequate quantities to meet all immediate needs. Fruits were not a very prominent factor on the square this morning. They have fallen far from the high estate in which they were some weeks A similar statement concerning their prices would be inaccurate, for they have maintained their position remarkably well. No plums were offered today, and very few pears, but peaches were very much in evidence. They retailed at prices that varied to an inconsiderable degree from those previously quoted. The health officer's action in commandeering a certain quantity of poor peaches on Saturday doubtless had the effect of ridding the square of all the 25c stuff. Trade in poultry was slow, indeed, and prices varied but little. The offerings were fair and of generally good

The monthly changes in the prices of skins, etc., were put in operation today. No change was made in the price of hides. The rather extended range of quotations in the prices of lambskins is necessitated by the present absence of pelts. The lowest price formerly quoted for pelts and the extreme price for lambskins is the present

Annual Meeting of the London Branch -Able Addresses by Field Secretary Rev. J. G. Shearer and Rev. W. J.

The London branch of the Ontario Lord's Day Alliance held its annual meeting last night in Dundas Center Methodist Church. The clergymen of the city were well represented, and there were also present a number of those interested in the important work being carried on by the alliance. The proceedings throughout were of the most interesting character. The chair was occupied by Rev. Dr. Saunders, pastor of the church; while, associated with him on the platform, were Rev. J. G. Shearer, the energetic and eloquent field secretary of the alliance; Rev. W. J. Clark, Rev. J. G. Stuart, Rev. A. J. MacGillivray, and Mr. G. W. Armstrong, treasurer of the local branch. In the audience were Very Rev. Dean Innes, Rev. C. C. Very Rev. Dean Innes, Rev. C. C. Owen, Rev. J. W. Holmes, Rev. W. M. Walker, Per. Walker, Rev. Dr. Johnston and Mr. J. G. Wright, secretary of the local branch.

After the usual devotional exercises and the rendition of an anthem by the choir, the chairman made his introductory remarks. The aims of the Lord's Day Alliance, he said, were such as to commend themselves to every true Christian. By securing the enactment of good legislation, and the enforcing of the same, it would be possible to secure to all the blessings of the Sabbath. The speaker then called on Mr. J. G. Wright to read his report as secretary of the local branch.

Mr. Wright's report showed that there were 120 members of the local branch. There had been five meetings of the executive held since the last annual meeting. The efforts of the branch to deter and discourage the non-observance of the Lord's Day had been not without good results. co-operation and support of all who valued the retaining of the sacred character of the Sabbath was needed. The report placed on record the appreiation of the branch of the manner in which the former president, Rev. Walter Moffatt, had performed his

Mr. G. W. Armstrong, before presenting his financial statement, read the following letter from Mayor Rumball: "I must express my regret at not being able to be present with you tonight. I can assure you that I am in hearty sympathy with anything that has for its object the carrying out of that grand old commandment that says 'Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work.' Apart from the religious side of the question. I know of no commandment that is so conducive to the health of the human race than this one, and the man or woman who works position; the total offerings were 170 more than six days of the week not only breaks the Divine command, but choice cattle were barely steady at his or her own health. Rev. W. J. Clark, the next speaker, expressed himself in hearty sympathy with the objects of the alliance. The Creator had appointed one day seven as needful for man's spiritual nature, and it was important that this day should be preserved. that the blessings of the Sabbath had been in many cases misused was no argument against its continuance. Present-day conditions, with competition so keen, fostered a tendency to encroach on the sacred character of the Sabbath. There was, of course, certain things that were necessary and rational, and the speaker believed it is as rational that a through train should run on Sunday as that an ocean steamship should do so. But there was a tendency on the part of men greedy for gain to make their employes do unnecessary work on the Sabbath. For instance, much of the labor on the great railways on the Sabbath was not necessary. The work of remedying this could not well be done by the individual or even by the church, yet it must needs be done. In every city and town the alliance found work to do in defending the right of the individual to spend the first day of the week in the way that seemed to him best. Their work was not to endeavor to make the individual go to church (and such an endeavor the speaker would oppose), but give every man the lib-to do as he chose. A good man had been appointed to take charge of the alliance's work, but to carry on this work finances were needed. The question of the preservation of the Lord's Day is one more important than all the political questions which will be discussed through the coming weeks. The law must be put upon a right basis, and this could only be done by the intelligent support of all who believe in the right of the individual to have secured to him the opportunity of spending one day of the week for his spiritual profit.

After a solo by Miss Hooper, the chairman introduced Rev. J. G. Shearer, with the statement that during the year of his occupancy of the office of field secretary, the alliance had made greater progress than in any previous

Rev. Mr. Shearer congratulated the city on having a mayor who evidently rejoiced in placing himself so unmistakably on record as in sympathy with the movement for the preservation of the Sabbath. In one thing, however, London was not to be congratulated. He had heard that the London Street Railway was a wealthy corporation, would evidently soon have to appeal to public charity if it were too poor to buy a few additional switchpoints to replace those being repaired. Pressure of business and a desire to save expenses were leading corpora-tions and employers to invade the sacred hours of the Sabbath. The railways and other institutions should be competled to take the common-sense

Private Bert Cole Heard From.

Private Bert. Cole, of the first Canadian contingent, writing to his father here from Krugersdorp, Transvaal, in a brief letter says that the marching had up to Aug. 23 caused one-half of the force of 600 Canadians to fall out. The letter is as follows:

"Krugersdorp, Aug. 23. "We have been on the march day and night all this month, sometimes not getting more than three or four hours' rest in 24. We just arrived here at Krugersdorp and we could send some mail off before we went on, so will have to hurry. We leave here in a little while for Pretoria, which will take three days more marching. We think when we get there that there will be orders for us to go home, as our colonel told us he had sent word to the Canadian government that we were all anxious to return. This is the hardest marching campaign, and I can say that I have finished every march, and have not dropped out once. There are only 300 of us left, and when we left Springs there We were on three-quarter rations for some time."
