Married by Telephone.

From the Galveston News.

Quite a novel wedding took place in Westchester, Texas, last week. Mr. J. M. Hudson and Mrs. Leave of Dallas came to be married, and, owing to the fact that the clerk was dead and his successor had not been appointed, they could not get any license. They telephoned to the clerk of the county and had him issue them a license; but still they were in a dilemma. They could not get it from their usual twenty-four hours, so they rushed up Judge Taylor, and were married by telephone, each holding a telephone to their ear until the solemn words "man and wife" were pronounced.

Another Life Saved.

About two years ago a prominent citizen of Chicago was told by his physicians that he must die. They said his system was so debilitated that there was nothing left to be done. He made up his mind to try a "new departure." He got some of Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" and took it according to directions. He began to improve at once. He kept up the treatment for some months, and, to-day, a well man. He says the "Discovery" saved his life.

Mamma—Who is that young man you were talking with to-day? Edith—Lord Fitzmoodle. He is making a tour of America. Mamma—Do you know anything about him? Edith—He has a magnificent estate in England, and lives like a prince. Mamma—Lives like a prince, does he? Edith—Yes, but I don't know his name. I had no idea he was so bad at that.

The Star eyes are unexcelled for cheapness and fast colors. Mr. and Mrs. Buntin were going out to walk. "Wait," said Mrs. B. "I don't want to go to bed, is it?" asked Mr. B. "Not that I know of." "Then what do you want with an umbrella?" "Oh, I always like to have something along with me when I'm walking." Mr. B. looked incredulous, but didn't say any explanations.

"They say love laughs at locksmiths," and we all know that a million combination locks won't keep the average small boy in the house if there happens to be a circus in town or a favorable opportunity open for fixing a tin pot attachment to the States is 2608, an average of 100 games per week during the playing season.

QUEBEC IN FRENCH HANDS

POLITICAL CONTROL IN THE PROVINCE LOST TO THE ENGLISH.

The Remarkable Change that has Come Over the French Canadians—Taking Possession of the Local and Provincial Government—A Frenchman's View.

Correspondent New York Sun.

MONTREAL, April 6.—As most of the readers of the Sun are doubtless aware, the population of the province of Quebec, which comprises that part of the dominion east of the Ottawa river as far as the confines of New Brunswick, is largely composed of French Canadians. Indeed, this element comprises, according to the latest census returns, about 75 per cent of the whole.

These people are almost exclusively Catholics and speak the French language, not a patois, as many suppose, but pure Norman French of the sixteenth century. At the time of the conquest of Canada by the British, about the middle of the last century, the French population numbered about 40,000. Since that time there have been no accessions due to immigration from abroad. Thousands of the people have gone to form settlements in the New England states and in the West, but, owing to the universal system of early marriages fostered by the Catholic church, this fragment of Frenchmen left by their mother country to foreign domination has not only steadily increasing in numbers until to-day it boasts of over a million souls. Although England, by the exploits of Wolfe and his men, expelled the French soldiers from the land, the people remained, retaining their customs, their language, their religion, and their political principles. The conquerors, also their civil law. English did more. It guaranteed, by the treaty of Quebec, to the subject people the free exercise of their language in the courts and in the legislature. And at this day, in the dominion parliament, the French language is an equal terms with the English, and public documents must be printed in both languages.

For years after the conquest the French made little progress in aught save multiplication. Quiet, religious and inoffensive, spiritless perhaps, they stuck to their farms and allowed a British oligarchy to govern them without murmur or complaint. When, in 1837, their burdens became, as they thought, too heavy, they rose in armed rebellion, and, although they were easily crushed, still the revolt practically secured to them equal rights and privileges with their Anglo-Saxon fellow citizens. Still, the French-Canadian element was slow in asserting itself, and many contented themselves with a fish-speaking vote was quite inconsiderable continued to elect English members. But since confederation the element has changed, and at this moment the French Canadian majority in the province has assumed an aggressive tone, which grows daily and fairly amounts many of the old British residents who have been accustomed to think of the French as "the inferior race," to find themselves employed by a governor-general in an important state paper. Already the French have seized upon the municipal governments of all the cities, and in the provincial government is entirely in their hands, for although the cabinet of seven usually contains two English Canadians, these latter have no real voice in the administration of affairs, and the legislature of sixty-five members contains but twelve English speaking members. The French Canadian proves to be as fond of office and of leading the public as anybody, and the civil service of the province is practically closed to any one with an English name.

In the city of Montreal, where the English minority are by all odds more wealthy and more enterprising than the French majority, the civil government is controlled by the French. It is safe to say that if the English in Montreal, the remainder would not amount to a fifth-rate Massachusetts village. The great business houses are English, the shipping and the great hotels, the finest wholesale and retail stores are all English. The leading banks are English. There are not many French members on the stock board. Any public subscription list to assist in alleviating any great calamity, or in promoting any public movement, will show that about 90 per cent is given by English speaking people. The French have not even a theatre or opera house in Montreal, and controlled by English Canadians. The French, in fact, spend little and contribute little to the general prosperity of the province. These facts are admitted on all hands, and the feelings of the British part of the community, who, aware of this state of affairs, feel themselves outwitted and intolerably treated by the majority, are anything but satisfactory.

The outlook is not hopeful for the English. The French continue to increase in numbers, while the English are deserting the province, and in twenty years they will be a small element of the population. Montreal will be inconceivable. The indications are that the demand of the French Canadians for a more complete recognition of their provincial autonomy will be eagerly granted by either political party at Ottawa. Sir John A. Macdonald, the leader of the conservative party, pending upon the support of the Lower Canadian conservatives has long been at the mercy of the Hon. Edward Blake, the liberal leader, anxious to see the province united with the rest of the Dominion. The Hon. Blake is, in fact, in a position to see that his adhesion, is pandering to his pretensions. What the end will be no one can foresee. It may be peaceful. It may not. The British Canadian can stand a good deal, but he will not be trampled on, and if he is driven too hard he may turn. As I have said, both languages are at level in the courts and both are spoken. Lawyers plead in either tongue, witnesses are sworn in either language, and judges, necessarily familiar with both, speak usually their native language. The country being under British rule, English, of course, is the official language, the use of French having been in favor granted at the time of the conquest. At the assizes held at L'Assommoir, in a county town about 100 miles below Quebec, in an action brought by an English non-resident against a French inhabitant of the locality, the presiding judge, a Frenchman, said that the defendant, his counsel and witnesses, all English, should speak French. This they refused to do, and the judge, therefore, dismissed their case. At the opening of the court next day, the judge, having apparently reflected upon his conduct, asked the counsel to have the case reopened for the purpose of having the French spoken. The judge, however, refused, and the case will be taken to the court of appeals. The matter has caused much excitement, and there is talk of pushing the judge before the high court of parliament. Straws show which way the wind blows.

Hall's Hair Renewer renews, cleanses, brightens, and invigorates the hair, and restores faded or gray hair to its youthful color and lustre. People who wish to prefer to use the Renewer, rather than proclaim to the world through their bleached locks that they are becoming aged, and passing on to decay.
