

of the character and condition of the population, of the Agriculture, of the Commerce, of the general commerce, and of the Fisheries; besides a number of other objects of interest, such as the mineral resources of the country, its lay for lines of communication, and its points for defence—must have engaged the active mind of Sir John Harvey, and rendered his tour a duty of the most arduous nature, instead of that succession of scenes of enjoyment which the splendour and éclat of His Excellency's station may lead it commonly to be supposed. There are other important considerations which have undoubtedly engaged His Excellency's attention; namely, the state of Education, the application of grants to Academies and Schools, the unattended-to claims of individuals, the pretensions of the discontented, and we may almost assert an unnumbered succession of applications which the necessary forbearance of a high character will neither neglect nor despise. We say thus much as a means of explanation to numbers of well-meaning persons, who under our view of the matter will be ready to acknowledge that they have beset the Lieutenant Governor's path and rendered it anything but a way beset with flowers or allowed His Excellency to repose upon a bed of roses. Every body hears of the immense expense incurred for the support of the Colonial Government, of the great salaries for doing nothing—but those people are widely astray who mix up with the minor offices (great as they may be) that of the Lieutenant Governor.

We are sorry to stop short here, but as a great writer says "fate forbids" not that our subject is exhausted but that our column is full. Vale at benedict.

A St. John Steamer will in future arrive here on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, and return on the alternate days.

Melton Somerville Esq.

Dear Sir,

We the Subscribers on behalf of the class who have attended your course of lectures in this place, respectfully beg leave to tender you our sincere thanks for the truly valuable information which we have received from you. The sound morality which distinguished your lectures, unimpaired by modern scepticism, or bigotry, renders them acceptable to the true Christian whilst your gentlemanly and dignified address will not be easily effaced from our minds, it will ensure for you a hearty welcome in every enlightened community.

With earnest wishes for your future happiness and welfare, it is with unfeigned sentiments of respect and esteem, that we claim the privilege of subscribing ourselves,

Your obliged friends, to fill the duties of his respectable and important situation, with ease to himself, and entire satisfaction to the Public. It is feared, that his anxious solicitude for, and unceasing attention to, his duties during his illness, succeeded by the poignancy of his grief, after her death, but too awfully tended to predispose his system, for the reception of the disease, which then so alarmingly prevailed. His afflicted widow has, we are satisfied, the sympathy and condolence of every member of our community, and we trust, will, in common with the many who have lately been called to endure the pangs of like bereavement, be strengthened by Him, whose "grace is a solace in every distress."
