Technical Education and its Advance

Nova Scotia is Heading the Whole of Canada in This Department of Educational Activity.

Technical and industrial education are in the air in the United States. Trade unions, employers, educators, politicians and publicists are arousing the whole country to the urgent need of it, in order that they may maintain their high place in the industrial world. At dinner conversations, in the legislatures, in the public schools and colleges, you hear industrial education on every hand. Workers wish to raise their working efficiency and wages, employers wish to help them to increase their productive capacity and are willing to pay for greater and better individual output, reformers wish to see a more intelligent, thrifty, industrious, skilled workman—and for their various desires they are turning to industrial and vocational education. It would seem to be a panacea for many industrial and social ills. Technical training is being advocated for both the child that is being educated in the public school and for the man already at work in the various trades.

When manual training was introduced into the school system some years ago it was opposed by many who thought manual labor was out of place in any educational scheme and by many others on the ground that it would teach a lot of boys a trade and thus swell the ranks with a lot of "home-made mechanics." All such fears have proved groundless and nothing in the scheme of studies has a higher educational value of mind and hand or has greater worth in teaching the future citizen the real dignity of labor. Now that the need of vocational training has come to the front, the serious consideration is presented that perhaps the manual training has not been made as practical as possible at the same time that its highest educational value was retained. Unfortunately it has, as have also the other studies, been developed under the scholastic tendencies into a cultural subject and has been removed as far as possible from the industrial or vocational aspect. There is not the close connection between actual practice in the school and actual practical work that should exist. The boys interested in never so keen as if the things he is working at are being made just as they are by his father or other grown up men who make the things for a living. The feeling for bringing the manual training nearer to actual industrial conditions is being met by supporters and the best types of manual training and mechanic arts high schools are modifying their instruction with this end in view. They are retaining men with good shop experience for teachers in preference to those who

A SAMSON OF THE WOODS

How Louis Dubois Fought and Conquered a Bear

VANCOUVER, Mar. 27.—A story of Herculean strength displayed by a gigantic Frenchman named Louis Dubois in an encounter with a bear at Toulon Mountain, on the Great Northern Railway, comes from Grand Forks. It appears that Dubois and a young costumed named Abe Campbell were cutting cordwood when they came on a bear's den. Seeing what they took to be the bear's nose protruding from the quarters it had taken up for the winter, the big Frenchman struck it a savage blow with his keen axe-blade. A tremendous commotion ensued, in which underbrush and snow were sent flying in all directions. The bear rushed at the intruders, and it soon became apparent that what they had mistaken for the animal's snout was in reality his foot which had been completely severed by the blow. Campbell succeeded in getting out of the way of the enraged brute, but the Frenchman was not so fortunate. Dubois raised his heavy, double-bladed axe, but the bear brushed it aside with his unmovable paw, and presently had the big man fast in his embrace in the struggle for life which ensued. The Frenchman succeeded in tripping up his wounded antagonist, which fell heavily to the ground, with Dubois on top of him. The man actually succeeded in pinning the bear to the ground, holding the legs apart, and firmly grasping the throat. Both man and bear were literally covered with blood from the dripping limb. Two other men came to Dubois' assistance, and the bear was despatched. When the men returned to camp it was found that Dubois had escaped without a scratch.

Child's Narrow Escape From Death

(Sackville Tribune.)
Persons who read a day or so ago of the death of a baby in Upper Canada, may be interested to learn that the mother of the child who died did not die; in all probability, that a similar tragedy would be narrowly averted in Sackville on the following day. She, however, proved to be the case. A little girl, less than four years old, the daughter of a well-known citizen had been given some pills by her mother. She afterwards climbed on a chair, which stood near the mantelpiece on which the pill box had been put, took the box and from it picked out some fifteen or sixteen pellets which she ate, unknown to her mother. Before long she became very sick and a physician was hastily summoned. He found her condition very serious and it was only with much difficulty that the little one's life was saved.

HER FACE WAS HER FORTUNE.
At a party recently they were playing a game which consisted of everybody in the room making a face, and the one who made the worst face won the prize. They all did their level best, and then a gentleman went up to one of the ladies and said: "Well, madam, I think you have won the prize."
"Oh," she said, "I wasn't playing."

Startling Statistics of Liquor Traffic

(Windsor Tribune.)
If there is anyone in Windsor who is astounded enough to believe that it is a good thing for a community to allow the sale of intoxicating liquors to continue, we will lay before him the following figures, which, by the way, are the only figures of life with a solid reputation for absolute truthfulness—
"The cost, direct and indirect, of the liquor traffic in Canada is over $150,000,000; our national assets are about $105,000,000—only enough to keep us in liquor for eight months. The nation's exports are valued at $213,521,000, and for every dollar's worth of exports we spend seventy cents for liquor. The public schools of Canada cost, in 1904, $25,225,857. The liquor consumed cost six times as much. Canada spent last year a little over $6,000,000 on her postal system and received good value. She spent over $150,000,000 on the liquor traffic—and what did she get?—5,000 corpses, 16,532 prisoners, thousands of orphans and tens of thousands of broken hearted wives and mothers and children. If the money squandered in this awful crime were available, what could it not do? It would give a university education to every young man and woman in Canada, and pay all expenses. It would give a comfortable cottage for each family in Canada—a million cottages at $12.50 per month. It would provide our national revenue each year and leave $79,000,000 for a rainy day. It would purchase a suit of clothes for every man, a dress for every woman, and all the clothes needed for every child from Cape Breton to Vancouver Island. All this and more could be done with the money squandered for intoxicating drink; but instead the traffic is permitted to plunder the country's wealth, destroy the country's bone and marrow, brutalize and debauch the defenceless women and children—why? Because the Christian manhood of Canada has not risen in its might to crush this awful foe."

The above stern arraignment of the liquor traffic was made at the Every Day Club St. John last Saturday evening by Rev. H. D. Marr, pastor of Queen Square Methodist Church. In

FRESH MEAT SCARC.

Strange events happen in this enlightened age, made possible through the means of rapid communication and transportation. During the last few weeks two million pounds of United States canned meat have been shipped from London to New York, on account of the scarcity of fresh meat in the States.

This shipment is an outgrowth of the financial disturbance in the United States last fall. Farmers, being unable to borrow money, rubled their cattle on the market instead of stall feeding them, and the result was an extraordinarily large consumption of meat, and also a curtailment of the supply available for the spring and summer months.

In this way a situation has arisen that is for the financial benefit of people in London holding large stores of American canned meats.

Even with freight charges to meet both ways across the Atlantic, the Chicago packers have been able to sell and re-ship their goods to America at prices 6 per cent. higher than they could obtain at home. London at present is the cheapest meat market in the world.

Toronto doctor says that, at least, one hundred babies have been starved to death in that city, during the month of January this year.
