AERATED OVENS

To get an oven working right you must have the right kind of fire to back it with. Even that is not enough, for if your oven is close, foul air is the result. Wholesome and delicate food becomes contaminated. Not only the food, but the odors are unhealthful. There, too, is the probability of food burning. All this handicaps the housewife, discourages her and makes the man ill-tempered.

Cooks quit their jobs when the stove is wrong, for it is they who are blamed when it is the stove that is all wrong. An aluminum oven, bright as new silver, thoroughly ventilated and heated by the best range fire possible is what you get in
