BUSINESS NOTICES.

Accompanying this number will be found blank forms, which all intending subscribers for the MONTHLY will kindly fill up, and return at once to the Treasurer. It is hoped that our old subscription list will remain complete, and that many new names will be added. The Alumni, and all friends of the College, are requested to assist us in this matter, not only by sending their own names, but where convenient, the names of others as well.

We beg to remind many of our friends who were in receipt of the MONTHLY last year, that they have neglected remitting their subscriptions. Would all such, in renewing their orders for this year, kindly forward payment for both. If any should decide not to give us their names, would they please indicate it by returning the copy received.

We have pleasure in commending to the liberal patronage of all our subscribers, and of the students in particular, the firms that so generously assist us by advertising in the MONTHLY. These firms, representing as they do, various lines and occupations, are all first-class in their respective departments, and thoroughly reliable.

PROSPECTUS.

THE KNOX COLLEGE MONTHLY starts out on the third year of its existence, and hopes at least to keep the ground it has already gained.

The competition in journalism seems boundless. One reason is the number of societies which are springing up, whether beneficially or not, in the state; each organization must have an organ through which to speak out its views and its doings. Each department of culture is pressed to a certain degree, unforeseen by those who opened them. There are also private gentlemen of leisure, and of learning, who desire to lay before the public their sober criticisms on the events of the day. From these and other sources the press floods the world with reading matter almost endless.
