Toronto is glad, therefore, and hails with pleasure the automobile show which opens here to-night. Of greater significance than any other is the fact that a substantial reduction is being made in the price of ordinary vehicles for o'dinary people. The luxurious car is still a luxury, but the everyday car is tumbling down in price. It will not be long, The World trusts, when, if we must buy foreign built cars, we will be able to get them in Canada at foreign prices, and if that is impossible, then the only thing to do is to produce a car ourselves as good as any foreign built car. No one likes the idea of having to pay more for a United States or English car than the prices usually charged, and those who are doing the buying had better try and find the solution of the problem.

Again, vindication of a public legal right ought not to be left to a private ridizen. There is far too much trucking the judgment of the supreme court of Canadian, sustaining the order of the railing to big public service corporations way commissioners requiring a two central romoto and Montreal and all intermediate points. Lord Chancellor Lorement and the members of the committee who sat with him, it is evident from the cabled summary of the proceedings, had no difficulty in holding that the section of the company's charter imposing third-class fares at two cents a mile was still in force and that it was not inconsistent with the Railway Act of 1966. That being so they could not tenterate the appearance of the committee of the state, that is of the clitwas not inconsistent with the Railway Act of 1966.
