Bank of England Cuts the Rate to Six

Surprise Sprung on Money Market—Some of the Reasons—Effect at Once on Stock Market in London.

London, June 23.—The Bank of England sprang a surprise upon the money market today by reducing its rate of discount one-half of one per cent, to six per cent, just as the banks were making up their half-yearly accounts.

It had been thought that the Bank of England would abstain from any reduction in the rate pending the settlement of the labor troubles, and it is believed the chief reason for the decision to lower the rate was the necessity that the treasury be able to borrow money more cheaply.

The recent reduction of the federal reserve bank rate in the United States and cheaper money conditions in that country were also gaining influences to the lower minimum rate.

The effect of the reduction was immediately seen in the stock market, where fair sized orders were placed in the gilt-edged section for war loans, Indian stocks, Argentine fours and other bonds. The market also hardened in other sections.

INTIMIDATION AT COAL MINES. Fear is Preventing Reopening Them. Meeting Tomorrow to Prepare for Conference on a General Strike—The Clyde Shipyards Workers Accept Reduction.

London, June 23—(Canadian Associated Press)—In all the British coal fields where miners have returned to work they are being subjected to intimidation by the strikers.

So far there has not been much actual violence, but the fear of it is preventing the re-opening of many pits. In Scotland soldiers are protecting the miners working in the few collieries which have resumed operations.

The miners' leaders will assemble in London tomorrow to prepare for the conference of representatives of unions threatened with wage reductions, which has been called for Saturday. At this conference the miners will press for a general strike, involving five million additional men, but it is generally believed their plans will prove abortive.

Some reports say that their general strike proposal met with a discouraging reception at the labor party conference at Brighton the other day, and it is generally thought that if the other unions take action it will be designed to save the face of the miners' leaders and make their surrender easier and not to extend the strike.

The same speaker gave an example of the financial results of the strike, saying that Nottinghamshire miners had not only exhausted all their funds, amounting to 250,000 pounds, but were 100,000 pounds in debt.

As indicating the effect of the strike upon the iron trade a prominent iron master says that for the first time in several generations not a single blast furnace is operating in a district where usually 300 are always working.

The Clyde shipyard workers have accepted a reduction in wages of six shillings nine pence a week.

NOT YET SETTLED. Matter of Longshoremen's Work on Steamship at the Sugar Refinery.

Contrary to expectations the members of the International Longshoremen's Association who had been engaged in unloading a cargo of raw sugar from the steamer Claudiere at the Sugar Refinery wharf did not return to work this morning. It is understood that the wages of unloading the ship is being carried on by members of the crew.

The position taken by the men is that for the type of work undertaken in this case the details of the compromise was presented while the William Thomson Company, local agents for the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company, maintain that the agreement called for fifteen men. The longshoremen employed stopped work on Tuesday evening as a protest, demanding the employment of the other three men. At this morning a conference was held between D. W. Ledingham, vice-president of the William Thomson Company, and the men's representatives, J. E. Donovan, president of the association; Joseph Montelli, secretary; J. McKinnon, business representative; and J. E. Donnan, president of the association.

The men questioned after the conference Mr. Ledingham said there was nothing to give out except that a conference had been held and that it was hoped a satisfactory settlement would be reached in the near future. When Mr. McKinnon was asked he said that another proposal had been brought forward and would be submitted to the men this afternoon.

FIND LIQUOR THAT DISAPPEARED

Stock Now in Quebec Commission Warehouse. Lot Worth $160,000 Taken at Night from Ontario Export Company's Premises—The Agent Says He Was Locked Up While Transfer Was Made.

Ottawa, June 23—(Canadian Press)—The $160,000 liquor stock of the Ontario Export Company which mysteriously disappeared from the warehouse and house here between dark Tuesday and daylight Wednesday morning has been located in the warehouse of the Quebec Liquor Commission in Hull, Que.

This is the liquor which was seized by Ontario government officers two weeks ago and officially disposed of, which was checked by an interim injunction. A report that the Quebec liquor commission had purchased the liquor just prior to the seizure could not be confirmed.

It is understood that the Hull police reported motor truck loads of liquor going into the warehouse on Tuesday night and that investigation revealed the fact that it was the identical liquor which was so dramatically removed from the warehouse of the Ontario Export Company here. The removal of the liquor from the warehouse created tremendous interest here yesterday.

Frank Falconer, the provincial agent, who was in charge of the liquor after it was seized, declared that during the night men entered the warehouse and after threatening him locked him in an upstairs room. An attempt by him to use the telephone and to sound the alarm was frustrated by the fact that the wires had been cut.

VARYING VIEWS ON LONDON PRESS

Comment on the Situation in Ireland. The King's Return—The Irish Times Declares Maintenance of Republican Campaign is a Foolish Proceeding.

Holyhead, Wales, June 23—King George and Queen Mary arrived here this morning from Belfast, where yesterday they presided at the state opening of the Ulster parliament. Immediately after landing they boarded their train for London.

The London Papers. London, June 23—Relief over the safe return of King George and Queen Mary from Belfast was expressed by this morning's newspapers, which also voiced appreciation of their courage in making the trip to the Irish city to open the Ulster parliament. Editorials warmly approved of the king's address, especially his plea that the Irish "forget a day and forget, and join in making for the land they love a peace, contented and good will."

The Daily News, however, strongly criticized the government which framed the speech for "simultaneously making a mockery and reproach of these moving works of its decision to send some troops to the south of Ireland. The London Times also denounced the government for "dashing all hopes by decreeing the intensified warfare in Ireland to the bitter end." It accused the government of failing to play the game with the king, who was said to have done all he could do.

Belief was strongly expressed by some papers that the opening of the Ulster parliament might lead eventually to the harmonious establishment of a parliament for united Ireland.

Commentators resented that to grant full independence to Ireland was "utterly irresponsible" but they urged that Great Britain was entirely willing to allow the Irish to manage their own affairs in their own way.

The Daily Telegraph, contending that in the south and west Ireland the Irish already have secured more than their constitutional leaders had asked, declared concessions would not be long withheld from a southern parliament which gave its hand in true friendship. "It rests with Irishmen," the newspaper continued, "to say when that they are arbiters of their own destiny."

Taking a similar view, the Chronicle maintained that "the pervasiveness which finds good prospects and hopes is too abnormal to last forever, and the question is how far southern Ireland will be carried along the path of ruin before it abandons her."

The Morning Post, which professed to see the beginning of a new epoch in the relations between Great Britain and Ireland in yesterday's ceremony, said the king's hopes for a future united and peaceful Ireland could "never be fulfilled until that country is delivered from the murderous conspirators who hold it in thrall."

The Irish Times. Dublin, June 23—(Canadian Associated Press)—Under the caption "The Choice" the Irish Times says editorially:—"During recent years the English magazines and reviews have discussed, from month to month, every conceivable aspect of the Irish question. Indeed, it succeeded the war as the main topic of their political articles. In this month of June, however, a significant silence has fallen upon them."

"We call the silence significant rather than curious, for it is easily explained. English publicists have been quick to appreciate the fact which the mass of Irishmen still choose to ignore. The elections to parliaments of Southern and Northern Ireland have entered the whole character and shifted the whole basis of the Irish problem. Hitherto, through all our sad centuries, the Irish people have been the arbiters of Irish destinies.

"Now everything is changed. The government of Ireland has made a clean sweep of the old order of things. Within certain well defined but liberal limits the British people have put Ireland's political future in her own keeping. The English magazines recognize today that there would be no profit in discussing for English readers matters which have ceased to be within English control.

"The southern elections have given southern Ireland a body of men who technically at least have all constitutional authority to speak her name.

"The northern elections have produced a parliament whose title to speak and act for Northern Ulster cannot be questioned. The peace of Ireland is in the hands of these two bodies. There will be no peace if the south insists on war, but peace will come certainly and perhaps quickly, if the leaders of southern Ireland really desire it, and make a real effort to get on good terms with their northern fellow countrymen.

Every interest of Northern Ulster demands settlement and co-operation since Irish counties, however, rigorous and homogeneous, cannot flourish so long as the other twenty-six are in a state of chaos.

The Times adds that in these circumstances the maintenance of the republican campaign is not merely wicked, it is almost incredibly foolish.

NEW RECTOR FOR DEVON NAMED. Fredericton, N. B., June 23—Rev. W. J. Branch, who has had many years' experience as a missionary in India, has been appointed rector of St. Mary's parish, Devon, to succeed Rev. G. W. Fisher, who has gone to Sackville.
