When the motor launch Psyche collided with a tender attached to the motor boat Priscilla M. last night a little after nine o'clock opposite Cedar Point, some distance above the Narrows, Ernest William Earle, aged fourteen years, son of Robert Earle, of 29 Murray street, was drowned and James Mealy, aged seventeen years, son of Albert Mealy, of 57 Lombard street, narrowly escaped the same fate. Both boys had climbed into the tender from the larger boat against the wishes of those in the party. They told young Earle of the danger he courted, but he paid no heed, and in a few minutes was joined by Mealy.

The Priscilla M. had on board a party composed of the two lads, with Charles Connell, owner, who was steering, his two daughters, Misses Mary and Emma, Thomas and Charles Connell, Arthur Welch, and Robert Earle, the dead lad's father. They had been at Cedar Point for the day and were returning to Indiantown when the accident happened. The Psyche had on board W. F. Smither owner, who was driving, Rev. J. C. B. Appel, John Wright, Gertrude and Florence Greene, Beatrice Giggey, Louis Slonwright, and Elsie Greene of Waltham, Mass.

car when you are doing your level best gar when you are doing your level best to peddle sugar. In explanation he cited a story.

At a social affair some time since the senator said, a certain pretty woman was numbered among the happy guests. During the evening she met one of the masculine guests for the first time and while conversing with him chanced to notice a decidedly homely man on the opposite side of the room.

"Mr. Jones," she sweetly remarked, "can you tell me the name of the man who is speaking to Mr. Brown? In all my life I don't think I ever saw a man quite so homely."

"I thought you had met him,' 'smiled Mr. Jones. "He is my brother."

"Your brother?" exclaimed the embarassed woman. "You must pardon me, Mr. Jones. I really didn't notice the resemblance."—Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph.
