CAPTAIN MOORE STRONGLY REPEATS DENIAL OF REPORT

Commander of Mount Temple Gives Story of His Action in Going to Titanic's Aid

"There is not another man sailing the high seas today that would have been more pleased or any more glad than I to have been able to go to the Titanic and render assistance to her passengers and crew," said Captain Moore of the C. P. R. liner Mount Temple, in an interview with a Times' reporter on board his steamer this morning. Captain Moore feels his position keenly in view of the reports that have been circulated to the effect that he deserted the Titanic's call for help and sailed in an opposite direction.

"The stories circulated, said the captain, are without foundation, and I and my crew are ready at any time to prove them so. Why the thing is utterly preposterous and there is not a single word of truth in any of the reports that are being sent out.

"On the night of the accident, said Captain Moore, we were sailing along at the rate of about ten miles an hour, or maybe less. I had retired for the night, and the second officer was on the bridge. About half-past twelve o'clock our wireless operator caught the 'C. P. R.' signal and just as soon as I was made known of the fact I got up and ordered the steamer to be turned back. We sailed in the direction given us by the Titanic's operator, and we judged that we were about fifty miles away from the scene of the disaster. I ordered all the crew on deck and had the life boats, humps and other life-saving apparatus gotten ready. The stokers were all supplied with extra grog and the ship was being sent ahead at all possible speed.

"Soon after three o'clock I brought the ship to a standstill, as we had encountered a field of ice that was at least five miles wide and utterly impassable. We could see the Carpathia on the other side of the ice and later the Californian and one of two other liners. We met a tramp liner also trying to make her way through the ice from the same side, but we were also unsuccessful. We cruised around in an effort to force our way through the ice, but without success.

"Between eight and nine o'clock we got a wireless from the Carpathia saying that she had picked up many of the Titanic's boats and that it was useless for us to stand by any longer. I then ordered the steamer turned ahead and we proceeded on our journey. From the time we first turned at half-past twelve o'clock until very early in the morning we could see no lights at all, as it was pitch dark, and I do not see how any of the passengers could see the Titanic. The ice was so thick that it would have cut through the iron plates on the ship like paper, so I decided that it was useless. I would have been very thankful if I could have seen any assistance, but God knows I did not see that either."

In regard to a story told by E. W. Zurich, a passenger on the Mount Temple, and referred to in today's despatches, Captain Moore said: "It is an utter falsehood. Why, how would that passenger know anything about what I and my officers were doing?—And then again there was not one passenger on board my steamer, and it would have been very foolish for me to try to force my way through five miles of ice for, undoubtedly I would have met with the same disaster as did the Titanic. The ice was so thick that it would have cut through the iron plates on the ship like paper, so I decided that it was useless. I would have been very thankful if I could have seen any assistance, but God knows I did not see that either."

CAPTAIN SMITH SAILED OUT OF WINDSOR, N. S.

Hants' Journal.—Capt. J. T. Smith, of the steamer Titanic, in 1884, sailed out of Windsor on the ship "Prince Royal" before the mast. The late Capt. Tom Curry was master, and Capt. Michael Doyle was second mate. This ship was built by the late Bennett Smith, and it is a strange coincidence that she was lost near the same place as the Titanic, in the ice off the banks of Newfoundland. Capt. Smith afterwards sailed as second mate on the ship "W. Moore."

Mr. Wyse had been an alderman more than once and always took a great interest in public matters. Elia Park, the one public square in Chatham that has been laid off and beautified, practically owed its existence to Mr. Wyse, who always took a great interest in it. He was at one time fishery overseer, but the last fifteen years had been in the furniture and auctioneer business. Mrs. London, of Chatham, is a sister and the brothers are Henry of Newcastle, James and John in the States.
