

THE ROYAL MARRIAGE.

THE BRIDE.

At last, with a great clangor of trumpets, which at first are muffled into a rich indistinctness behind the curtains, the long looked for procession of the bride enters, and the Prince, giving one look to satisfy himself of the fact of the arrival, keeps his eyes fixed upon the Queen, and never turns his head again till his affianced stands beside him.

The hush was now so deep and breathless that even the restless glitter of the jewels that twinkled everywhere seemed almost to break it, and, despite the stately etiquette which had hitherto regulated every word and gesture, all now bent far and eagerly forward, as the hum and rustle in the nave beyond showed the young bride to be drawing near. In another minute she had entered, and stood

"In gloss of satin and glimmer of pearls, Queen lily and rose in one."

the fairest and almost the youngest of all her lovely train that bloomed in fair array behind her. Though not agitated, she appeared nervous, and the soft, delicate bloom of color, which ordinarily imparts a look of joyous happiness to her expressive features, had all but disappeared, as, with head bent down, but glancing her eyes occasionally from side to side, she moved slowly up toward the altar. The programme tells us that she was supported on the right by her royal father, Prince Christian, of Denmark, and on her left by the Duke of Cambridge, and the same dry but most authentic document leads us to believe that both were in full uniform, and wore the collars and badges of their respective orders of knighthood. But without wishing at all to derogate from the importance of these illustrious personages, we may say that any one might have safely borne their part, so deep, so all-absorbing was the interest with which the bride, and bride alone, was watched. From the way her features are now shaded by the veil, and her looks bent forward, it is difficult to see her features more fully, but as she nears the altar, she drops her arm, and for the first time appears beneath the folds of her veil a large bouquet of orange flowers, carried in a princely gift from the Maharajah Dhuleep Singh.

HOW SHE WAS DRESSED.

On these occasions, we believe, the dress of the bride ranks in general estimation as only second in importance in the celebration of the ceremony itself, which is to be regretted, for a lady's dress, like a lady's beauty, can only be described by its effect. It is embroidered white silk, trimmed with silver, which can just be discerned in rich designs, glittering between the snowy folds. The traditional white is not, however, departed from, though over all she wears a slight bodice with open sleeves of white silk, embroidered with silver, and which, falling tight, sets off her tapering waist and faultless symmetry to absolute perfection.

A COUNTRY PUDDING.—Mix the yolks of three eggs smoothly with three heaped tablespoonful of flour; thin the batter with new milk till it is of the consistency of cream; whisk the whites of the eggs separately, stir them with the batter and boil the pudding in a floured cloth for an hour. Before it is served, cut the top quickly in crossbars, pour over it a small pot of strawberry jam, and send to table quickly.

STONE CREAM.—Put a thick layer of greenage, or any other jam, at the bottom of a glass dish. Boil an ounce of gelatine in a pint of cream and milk; sweeten it to your taste, pour it over the jam, and when cold it will be quite solid, and a deliciously sweet dish.

TO FRESHEN STALE BREAD.—Wrap the loaf in a clean cloth, and dip it for half a minute into boiling water. Then take off the cloth, and bake the loaf for ten minutes in a slow oven.
