

Free Weekly

Vol. IV. SAINT JOHN, (N. B.) FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1839.

12s. 6d. if paid in advance. No. 2.

The Chronicle.
It is published every Friday afternoon, by LAWSON W. DICKER & Co. at their Office in St. John's, New Brunswick, at the corner of the Market and Water Streets.

Terms—Five shillings per annum, in advance.—When sent by mail, 2s. 6d. extra.
Any person forwarding the name of six responsible subscribers will be entitled to a copy gratis.

All letters, communications, &c. must be post paid, or they will not be attended to.—No paper discontinued until arrears are paid.

Weekly Almanach.

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
14	15	16	17	18	19	20
27	28	29	30	1	2	3

Public Institutions.

Bank of New-Brunswick.	Bank of St. John.	Bank of the Maritimes.	Bank of the North-East.	Bank of the West.
11 to 12 o'clock	11 to 12 o'clock	11 to 12 o'clock	11 to 12 o'clock	11 to 12 o'clock

The Chronicle.—It is published every Friday afternoon, by LAWSON W. DICKER & Co. at their Office in St. John's, New Brunswick, at the corner of the Market and Water Streets.

It was impossible to the justice of this reasoning, but requisite energy for acting upon it. While I still hesitated, they put themselves in motion, and with their provokes and fury at the near prospect of our success and plunder, Stamar, leading his men, gave the word to advance, and the pirates alone remained near me.

when an accident occurred which had fairly raised an alarm. One of the pirates stepped upon a spar, which turned, hissing and furious, and bit him. The pain and started man gave utterance to a short and fierce cry, and Stamar, rushing furiously towards him. The wounded man, however, did not wait either the reproach or the punishment intended for him; but fell to the earth in perfectly awful convulsions, and expired.

State of Trade as compared with the past year.—The official returns, which have just been made public, relative to the trade of the United Kingdom, have given much satisfaction in the city, proving they do not materially differ from what the public mind was not marked by any great speculations, still the trade of the country is in a most healthy and sound condition. It is shown by these returns that the value of imports into the United Kingdom (as per official valuation) was 2,012,263,230, being an increase of 25,500,000 over the imports of 1837.

THE PIRATE.
BY A FRENCH NAVAL OFFICIER.
(Continued.)
At the close of the second day of our horrible suffering and slow but most tortuous journeying, pain, fever, and weakness, had so completely overcome me that I fell powerless at the foot of a tree.

Summing up all my remaining energy and resolution, I rose, and commenced our march in sight of, but at some distance from, the main body of the pirates. Whether the motion was just at an end, or whether my former weakness, I found myself considerably better by mid-day; and was greatly aided and cheered by Peters, who supported my tottering frame, and never for a single instant abandoned me.

then seized the body of his victim in his arms, and the herald, he hailed, shouting, "Comrades, behold the signal I promised you!" And the wailers raised up the wailing shout, "Death and plunder! Stamar for ever!"
(To be continued.)

Prizes—The following prizes for destroying large quantities of work by Professor Brande, and are deserving of extensive circulation as very effective preparations; indeed, they can hardly be too strongly recommended. They were first used, four years ago, in the management of one of the metropolitan public institutions, where this disagreeable vermin had gained a very troublesome lodgment, and by a little patient use of the use of these preparations recommended by Professor Brande, in the spring of autumn of each year there was not during the last two seasons nearly a single louse to be found at the establishment. The infested beds should be taken to pieces, and every joint and crevice well washed and brushed over with the following solution or ointment: Dissolve one ounce of corrosive sublimate and one ounce of white arsenic in a pint of rectified spirit of wine, and add four ounces of castor oil and four ounces of oil of turpentine—Dissolve in a quart of spirit of wine in powder, two ounces of oil of turpentine, two ounces of yellow wax, and one ounce of olive oil; put these ingredients into a gallon of boiling water, and when the wax is liquid stir the whole in a gentle manner, until the more effectual agent of the two, so that the solution should only be used to rub into crevices where the ointment cannot be easily applied.

Peters, who was of far more heroic frame than I, had also far better supported our painful march; and while I lay helpless at the foot of the tree where I had fallen, he busied himself in exploring the surrounding spots, in the hope of finding some safer and more comfortable shelter for me during the night. He returned suddenly, and at the most rapid pace that the state of his feet would allow. "We are saved, Daumont," he exclaimed, "as soon as he got within hail of me; there is a great light on this side; it is a fire kindled either by some of our people or by the Maroons; and faith, it would be far better even to fall into the hands of the negroes than to be here, like a couple of wretched dogs!"

TO JULIA.
Pride, which not a world would bow,
Lies low to thee, —
Lord Byron.
There's something in thy face, I know not what,
That draws my heart so quickly thine.
When I look on thee, that oft I feel
Myself electrified, and wonder why.
Thou seem'st to have some magic power;
Which ever passes me by with needless glance,
Or with no glance at all, as if I were
To thee, of no importance, I have been
By thee, as if I were no more;
My spirit so aloof, and haughty bends
To gaze upon thee, and I know not why.
That all the pain I ever felt, it has Compared with all which thou hast given would Be nothing.

At that instant, in fact, I caught sight of the nocturnal bivouac, which presented an appearance at once wild, strange, and animated. An immense fire, constantly fed with fuel by some of the dark thrves, lit up the scene, and the fire, as if by magic, lay about fifty yards from me, and as if by magic, some careless and abandoning themselves to sleep, or others with hands pressed on their weather-worn brows, and in anxiety or despair—These fifty, ere all of the lately numerous and terrible crew of the Shark that had not fallen beneath the fury of the English.

These, as it were, the political dangers of her property, her person, even her establishment, is sacred and secure. Her tongue is free and uncontrolled, and neither husband, father, nor mother, could dare to interfere with her. If the husband has the faculty of divorcing his wife, the wife also can divorce the husband, and the mother of a son is absolute mistress. In all the practices of religion, men, prayers are the same for both; the title of God is common to both; so is that of Hajji. The privileges of the pilgrimages are common to both. The women have as much freedom as the men, and much more enjoyment in excursions, parties of pleasure, visiting, shopping, and going to the bath. A woman's property is as secure as that of a man. A wife's fortune is her own, and does not, as amongst you, become the property of her husband. The women receive as much, and the same education as the men. The women are treated by the men with a respect which still they do not always show in return; and when a woman addresses a man, he reverently casts his eyes upon the ground. In what are we inferior to the women of Europe? It is because the men do not stare at us so impudently in the face, and through spreading their hands. You talk of your great advantages in the selection of husbands and wives, but are your marriages happier than ours, and have you the means of separation if you do not agree? And would you not appear as quarrelsome as the female sex in this respect, as in other parts of the world, carry on their quarrels, though it is called a distaff.

"I have told the captain how unfit you are to go forward, and by way of answer he sent me to a hundred thousand devils, and told me that I may stay with you if I choose, but that he can leave us neither food nor water. It is quite certain, therefore, that you must go on with us, and you may rely upon it, I will assist you to my utmost," said Peters to me.

It is to be regretted, that the hour of our capture, which we have just passed, has not been more fatal to the pirates; and that we have not been more fortunate in our escape. The hour, however, which we have just passed, has not been more fatal to the pirates; and that we have not been more fortunate in our escape. The hour, however, which we have just passed, has not been more fatal to the pirates; and that we have not been more fortunate in our escape.

At that instant, in fact, I caught sight of the nocturnal bivouac, which presented an appearance at once wild, strange, and animated. An immense fire, constantly fed with fuel by some of the dark thrves, lit up the scene, and the fire, as if by magic, lay about fifty yards from me, and as if by magic, some careless and abandoning themselves to sleep, or others with hands pressed on their weather-worn brows, and in anxiety or despair—These fifty, ere all of the lately numerous and terrible crew of the Shark that had not fallen beneath the fury of the English.

These, as it were, the political dangers of her property, her person, even her establishment, is sacred and secure. Her tongue is free and uncontrolled, and neither husband, father, nor mother, could dare to interfere with her. If the husband has the faculty of divorcing his wife, the wife also can divorce the husband, and the mother of a son is absolute mistress. In all the practices of religion, men, prayers are the same for both; the title of God is common to both; so is that of Hajji. The privileges of the pilgrimages are common to both. The women have as much freedom as the men, and much more enjoyment in excursions, parties of pleasure, visiting, shopping, and going to the bath. A woman's property is as secure as that of a man. A wife's fortune is her own, and does not, as amongst you, become the property of her husband.