There were many egant summer cottages within the ath of the fire, but by almost superuman exertions these were saved, the nly exception being No. 1 Algonquin cottage which was burned. The end f No. 2 cottage was burned out, but he rest of the building was saved. Desperate efforts were required to ave the summer home of G. B. Hopins of New York. This building was eparated from the hotel by the width of the street. Though the roof caught everal times the fire fighters resolutely efused to abandon it, and it was finally saved from destruction. Had it burned, there were half a dozen other beautiful summer houses that would andoubtedly have been destroyed.

It was most providential that the wind was blowing away from the town, otherwise nothing could have haved it from a terrible scorching.

Construction men say that the concrete additions which passed through the fire can be used in the restoration of the building.

While the loss of the hotel is regarded as a present calamity, it is felt that it will ultimately prove a blessing. Not only has a great menace to the town been removed, and a possible holocaust prevented, but a more modern and inore beautiful structure will undoubtedly be erected by the C. P. R. at once. The company has had plans in readiness for several years, but were loath to part with the wooden section. The fire has now cleared the way for them and they will be able to proceed with their plans.

Kitchener in Danger.

The Kitchener was unable, however, to locate the schooner and the tug was turned back as she had shipped a considerable quantity of water and had to be pumped out. It was said last night that the Kitchener was in a very dangerous condition just before she was swung about and that at one time almost capsised.

Captain Hagan and his crew courageously endeavored to save the Conrad S. after the towline had slipped from the bits and the scamen worked the schooner abreast of Partridge Island before she became unmanageable and they stuck to their task so undauntedly and persistently that when they prepared to look to their own salvation the vessel was in the breakers at Black Point. By almost superhuman efforts the motor boat was carefully made ready for the final dash and timing well the heave of the tiny craft, they succeeded in leaving the side of the schooner in safety. It was a perilous trip they said all the way up the shore and they were drenched to the skin when they arrived at Market slip at 12.15 Sunday morning after a struggle lasting more than an hour.
