CURTAIN RUNG DOWN ON LIVELY SESSION OF PARLIAMENT

(Continued from page 1.) Many to refer all railway matters hereafter to the railway commission for decision as to location and construction, was killed in the senate.

The destruction of the bill based on the petition of certain extent clauses in regard to the method and place of prosecuting offenders. In regard to the extension of the parliamentary term, the legislation is not yet through the final stage of the British house.

One of the outstanding features of the session which will still continue to be foremost in public interests has been the operations of the steel company, and with the consequent outcome of the Meredith-Duff commission and the inquiry into the operations of the steel company.
