Detroit Specialist Discovers Something Entirely New For The Cure of Men's Diseases in Their Own Homes.

YOU PAY ONLY IF CURED

Expects No Money Unless He Cures You. Method and Full Particulars Sent Free. Write for it This Very Day.

A Detroit specialist who has 14 certificates and diplomas from colleges and medical boards, has perfected a startling method of curing the diseases of men in their own homes, and so that there may be no doubt in the mind of any man that he has both the method and the ability to do as he says, Dr. Goldberg, the discoverer, will send the method entirely free to all men who send him their names and address. He wants to hear from men who have stricture that they have been unable to get cured, prostatic trouble, sexual weakness, varicocele, lost manhood, blood poison, hydrocele, emaciation of parts, impotency, etc. His wonderful method not only cures the condition itself, but likewise all the complications, such as rheumatism, bladder or kidney trouble, heart disease, etc.

The doctor realizes that it is one to make claims and another thing to back them up, so he has made a rule not to ask for money unless he cures you and when you are cured he feels sure that you will willingly pay him a small fee. It would seem, therefore, that it is to the best interests of every man who suffers in this way to write the doctor confidentially and lay your case before him. He sends the method as well as many booklets on the subject, including the one that contains the 14 diplomas and certificates, entirely free. Address him simply Dr. S. Goldberg, 308 Woodward Avenue, room F, Detroit, Mich., and it will all immediately be sent you free.

This is something entirely new and well worth knowing more about. Write at once to Dr. S. Goldberg.

APPLE PICKERS!

If you want to get all the best fruit on the tree, hand picked, you must use a WAGONER EXTENSION LADDER. You cannot reach the middle of the tree, where the best apples grow, so readily with any other. It is light and easily handled, and enables a man to pick more apples in a day.

CULINARY CAPERS.

What salt is to an egg such is rice to gumbo. No self respecting cook would ever think of parting the two.

For sponge cakes always sift the flour twice, for the oftener the flour is sifted the lighter will be the cake.

Fresh meat must never be salted when frying, for salt tends to extract the juice of the meat and at the same time harden it.

It is recommended to soak ham in sweet milk overnight after slicing it for frying or broiling. The milk is said to make it very sweet and tender.

If the cream for whipping seems rather thin, try adding a pinch of powdered gum arabic, sifting into the cream with a little powdered sugar.

A very good upper crust for a deep pie is made by rubbing a tablespoonful of butter into three tablespoonfuls of flour—pastry flour preferred. Use enough ice water to make a paste.

A very rich fruit dessert is figs a la creme. Steam large figs for fifteen minutes, cut open at the widest end and fill with a mixture of apricot jam and chopped English walnuts. Close the figs, roll in powdered sugar and serve with whipped cream.

The Kitchen Thermometer.

Every up to date kitchen has a thermometer in it nowadays, and it is in almost constant use. There is no uncertainty, therefore, as to whether the oven is just right for the roast, nor when it is proper that the poundcake should be slipped in. The state of the oven has of course a great influence on the amateur cook's efforts. If there is anything in the world that is exasperating it is to make a cake with great care and then to have the oven so hot that the top crust burns before the inside bakes. It is bad also to have the bread bake so quickly that it does not have a chance to swell as much as it should. These catastrophes and many others happened to the amateur cook before the thermometer came into vogue as a part of the kitchen equipment. They couldn't happen now with it hanging within easy reach, all ready to be taken down and placed in the oven for a space. Many of the new cookbooks not only tell how long each dish must be cooked, but they tell exactly at what temperature they must be kept while cooking. This is of the greatest help to the woman who does without the services of a cook.

Women as Wage Earners.

According to statistics of the London county council there are in London 2,334,466 females, of whom 719,331 are wage earners. More than half a million are unmarried. The occupations followed by these female workers are said to cover the whole range of employment. These statistics are remarkable as showing how large a proportion of the work done in the world's greatest city is carried on by women. The suggestion that the entrance of women into so many lines of work is to the detriment of the other sex and of the industrial situation is plainly fallacious. The enlistment of the gentler sex in the ranks of wage earners increases the aggregate production and adds greatly to the total wealth of the world. The drawbacks are not economic, but social. That there should be more than half a million grown women in the city of London unmarried and engaged in daily toil does not argue a normal condition of society. The situation may not be so extreme in our American cities, but is rapidly becoming so.—Atlanta Journal.

Women Grooms.

An American lady is responsible for a remarkable innovation. She took over to England a number of women grooms, and now they have become a fad with wealthy English. The especial duty of the feminine groom is to attend her mistress when out on horseback. It is now pointed out that she is much more desirable in that capacity than a man. She is useful in case of illness or accident, and she can wait on her mistress in many useful ways. Besides she serves for company if the latter feels inclined to talk, while the male attendant must, of course, be steadfastly ignored. Women grooms do not care for the horses. If competent they teach their employer to ride, aiding her to mount and dismount. These positions are usually held by the daughters of the riding masters.

Setting Colors.

Before a new print goes into the tub set the colors. The way of doing that depends on the colors. For green, blue, pinkish purple, mauve and aniline reds soak ten minutes in alum water, using four ounces of alum to a tub of water. For the madder tints soak in sugar of lead solution—an ounce of the salt to a gallon of water. For black, black and white, grays and deep purples dissolve a handful of coarse salt in a tub of water and soak about seven minutes. Some blacks are made fresher and more permanent by putting strong black pepper tea into the first suds. It is best to try the color of anything by wetting a small piece in the various solutions and using that from which it comes out brightest.

A Charitable Queen.

Philanthropy is with the queen of Portugal as much a passion as hunting, music or painting. She is at the head of all Portuguese charitable establishments, which she directs in person even to the minutest details. Many and many a time she will quit the palace at some early morning hour unaccompanied, simply dressed in black, and none of the household dare ask whither goes her majesty, for all know she is bound on some secret errand of mercy. Once when a civic guard, recognizing her and seeing her enter one of the lowest quarters in Lisbon, followed to watch over her safety, she sternly forbade him to divulge what he had seen or to unmask her anonymity.

RESTING IN MIDAIR.

Faculty of Poising Possessed by Some of the Largest Birds.

"While I never have seen it explained in print," said one of the ornithological sharps of the zoo, "it is a wonder to me persons should express amazement at the ability of certain birds to hang poised in the air without wing motion."

"It is a favorite trick of the great condor. Away in the air, far beyond the mountain tops, these birds hang poised as motionless as if perched on solid rock. True, their wings are outstretched, but even through glasses not the slightest motion is perceptible. They remain in this position for many minutes, sometimes for an hour, making a careful scrutiny of everything below them in their search for prey. Then, with a slight tilting of the wings, they flap slowly away, or, having found what they were seeking, dart like a bullet toward it. The eagle, hawk and other species have this same faculty of poising apparently on nothing."

"These birds move about until they meet an uprising current of air. It may come from immediately beneath them, from wind deflected by striking a cliff along the sea, or may come from a great distance, where a rushing wind struck the side of a mountain and was turned upward. Being on the wing most of the time in search of prey, they have learned to utilize these uprushing air currents for their own purposes. Coming to one of these and heading to the wind, they fix their pinions at an angle which will permit them to rest there and scrutinize something that has taken their attention perhaps on the plain below. Thus, while they seem poised on nothing, the air current rushing upward buoy's them."

"You see the same thing in mid-ocean when ships are followed by flocks of gulls, in some rare case clear across the ocean. When the ships start out the gulls fly here and there, sometimes away on high and again skimming the surface of the water in search of food. As the hours and days pass they tire, and then you will see them poise for rest on the air current rising from the stern of the ship. The onrush of an ocean greyhound creates a swiftly rising air current in its wake. This curls over like a wave and rushes into the vacuum made by the steamer, and on it the gulls are carried along without effort and at the same speed at which the ship is traveling."

BIT OF FRENCH HISTORY.

An Empire Lost For Want of the Right Sort of Riding Habit.

An old legend which makes no pretense to truth tells how a kingdom was lost for want of a horseshoe nail. But a volume of sober historical and biographical purpose, written by Count d'Herrison, makes it appear that the Empress Eugenie, after the battle of Sedan, lost the chance to preserve the empire of her husband by not possessing exactly the right sort of riding habit. It was the evening of Sept. 3, 1870.

The news of the surrender of the French army and of the Emperor Napoleon at Sedan had spread about Paris. The city was excited, and there was talk of a revolution and the banishment of the imperial family. At this juncture Emile de Girardin, a man who was trusted by the empress and who had had no little experience during the previous changes of government, arrived at the palace of the Tuilleries. "If your majesty were to appear on horseback in the midst of the people," Girardin said, "and announce the abdication of the emperor in favor of the prince imperial, your own assumption of the title of empress regent and the appointment of Thiers as prime minister, the empire might be saved. Something must be done to turn the tide."

The empress accepted the advice. But when this leader of the world's fashion sought for a proper costume for her performance it could not be found. The only riding habit in the Tuilleries was a fantastic one of green, embroidered with gold and silver, made for a festal hunting occasion, and the hat was a not less fantastic three cornered affair of the epoch of Louis Quinze. The empress felt that it would not do to appear in this garb on such an occasion. Her appearance in it might have the opposite effect upon the people from that which she intended. The plan had to be given up, the empress and the prince imperial were banished and the Napoleonic empire was at an end.

A NOSE FOR NEWS.

The Genuine Newspaper Reporter Is Born, Not Made.

"Poets are born, not made," said the retired newspaper man to the New Orleans Times-Democrat, "and I might add that reporters come into this world in much the same way. For instance, the 'born' reporter will get a story if there is one in sight, while he who only has what I would call a mechanical sort of training will skim over the same ground without ever discovering that anything out of the ordinary has happened. Not many years ago I was holding an important position on one of the principal journals of Chicago. I was one day put on the city editor's desk, and wanting to test the ability of two new men on the staff, I assigned both of them to the same story. Of course neither knew the other was in the neighborhood, and you ought to have seen their respective reports. One of them had a two column story that created a sensation from one end of the city to the other, while the other turned in about two 'sticks' of the driest stuff I ever remember to have read. I am satisfied that both the men covered the story to the best of their respective abilities. One of them simply had a 'nose for news' and the other didn't. As I said, reporters are born, not made by studying 'journalism' in the abstract. The natural born reporter is at home in a newspaper office, he can live on ink and can sleep soundly on the imposing stone. He sees little news in a dog biting a man, but he is quick to grasp the importance of an item telling about a man biting a dog."

A Puzzling Problem.

The man seemed to be very much excited.

"We've made a bet," he said, "on a question of law, and we've agreed to leave it to you."

"I'll do the best I can to settle it," returned the great lawyer, gratified by this evidence of the opinion in which he was held. "What is the question of law?"

"Why, a two dollar cat belonging to Brown ate a ten dollar bird belonging to Jones, and we want to know who has legal title to the combination of bird and cat."

A Word In Season.

The playwright turned pale with excitement and a sudden rush of pride as he heard from his position in the wings the sound of stamping feet and roaring voices.

"They are calling for the author!" he cried feverishly. "What shall I do? Must I make a speech?"

The manager, who had not only heard but seen the audience, took him by the elbow.

"The best thing you can do," he whispered, "is to slip out of the stage door and escape while there's time."

The Eucalyptus Tree.

When the world's supply of coal is exhausted, which is not a matter for immediate worry, the eucalyptus tree may be grown as a substitute. This eucalyptus stores up more of the sun's energy than any other tree (1 per cent. of that reflected on the unit of area), and in South Africa it has been found cheaper to raise it than to import coal. An acre of eucalyptus plantation will produce each year the equivalent of thirty tons of coal.

His Musical Taste.

"You never applaud at a concert," "No," answered Mr. Canroix. "I enjoy a piece well enough to applaud it. I know by that fact that it isn't the sort of music that mother and the girls would approve of my applauding."

Convictions that remain silent are neither sincere nor profound.—Balzac.
