Vegetable Ointment. ESTABLISHED IN 1822. IN all past ages, oliments have stood prominent among remedies, and the practice of annoisting with such is often referred to in the scriptures abut in latter times, in consequence of too little attention having been paid to their composition, they have not been esteemed at their proper value. Here, however, is a remedy for a multitude of atiments, which has stood the test of scientific research, as well as of experience. As a Home remedy, it is invaluable, supplying, as it does, a prompt renef in nearly all cases of accident; where other remedies have falled it has succeeded, and never has its use been otherwise than beneficial.

It is admitted by all, that a great proportion of human diseases are the consequence of inflammation—now common sense would point to a remedy which might reduce such. But it is a fact that nine out of the valued of outments of the day, increase instead of alaying it. At the same time being of a softening and emollient nature, it opens the pores, stimulates the absorbents and glands, and produces a healthy action of every part to which it is applied.

Both in summ. rand winter affections, it is alike un-ful—and in every climate it retains its virtues. The mine a focusional use it extensively to aliay the inflammation produced by the leaves of the Scrub Oak. Tan, Sunburseless Histers are speedly cur-d by its use, and in deeper sented troubles, such as Cancers, Ulcers, Erysipelas, &c., it may be used in conjunction with remedes prescribed by a physician, not only without danger but with real benefit. With this remedy in the house, indeed, a physician, in nine cases out of ten is needless—for it is itself a real house doctor!
