The City of Eternal Light

Under the above heading the editor of the Maywood (Illinois) Herald-Examiner, who recently visited Medicine Hat, gives the city the appellation write-up.
"While touring Canada during the month of October, 1927, I had the pleasure of visiting the city of Medicine Hat, in the Province of Alberta, and was so impressed with the wonderful natural resources of the city that I wrote a story for the Chicago Weekly in which I quoted, conversely, he had just twenty years previous with a broadened perspective from Medicine Hat who at that time was so prophetic of a great future for the struggle of this town that he said: "Young lady, you'll hear of that town if you live." She's born lucky.
True to the prophecy, the town that was then lucky has come into its own. A more ideal location for the manufacturing metropolis could not be found. Even nature has exerted herself in providing all the natural resources necessary for the promoting of a most successful enterprise.
Situated as it is on the South Sas-atchewan River at the intersection of the Crow's Nest R.R. with the main line of the Canadian Pacific R.R., 60 miles west of Winnipeg, 200 miles east of the Rocky Mountains, 800 miles from Vancouver and 70 miles north of the State of Montana, U.S.A., the question of transportation facilities is easily solved.
Medicine Hat has a population of 25,000, and it is the centre of a district which is tributary to it of 100 square miles. It is a wide-awake and energetic, ambitious city that is looking ahead with gigantic strides its citizens are splendid specimens of courageous men and women imbued with determination to make their city the great commercial centre of Alberta, if not the centre of British North America. It is a city of splendid, artistic, comfortable residences and fine public buildings.
There are three imperative essentials to be considered in the selection of a manufacturing city, namely: light, power and heat. Medicine Hat has been richly endowed by Nature with these three essentials inasmuch, with her great gas wells she has a commodity that supplies light, heat and power, and at a cheaper rate than can be derived through any other source and at such a pressure—52 to 500 pounds to the square inch that
