THE PRIDE OF THE SEA.

(From Agents' Herald.)

The ocean steamer "Ethiopia" ploughed her way through the angry, ruffled sea. She seemed a being of impulses and feelings, and tossed at the waves retarding her progress, raised her iron bow high in the air and mournfully plunged it deep, deep down, raising a foam which she disdainfully cast aside as unworthy of her notice.

On deck, many were watching the vivid scenes and shuddering at the vivid flashes of lightning that seemed to laugh at their peril. Suddenly the ship gave a heavy lurch to leeward, and a young and white-clad form was plunged headlong into the sea.

The piteous, heartrending shrieks, "Woman overboard!" sang out from the man at the wheel.

"My daughter! my daughter! My fortune to the man who saves her!" cried an old man, as he rushed wildly to the vessel's side. "Won't anyone save her? Oh, Heaven, have mercy!"

A man plunged through the air, struck the sea head first, and then began a battle between the water and a human being.

"Keep up, girl! I'm coming!" he cried.

He reached her—the mad waves revengingly pushed him aside—she sank.

A boat was lowered from the steamer. Volunteers were plenty. Everybody was on deck, watching this unequal struggle.

He reached her—she desperately grasped his neck.

He realized that both would sink, pushed her away, and disappeared from sight.

An angry wave overwhelmed them; it broke away.

He had conquered, and "treading water," held her above the surf, her pale face turned to the vessel.

charged as a seaman, and are now my guest. Steward, assign Mr. Edwards a stateroom.

The good ship "Ethiopia" ploughed her way tirelessly on.

The storm, discouraged at its futile efforts to master her, moved away to other climes, and that night the ocean was as smooth as a lake.

Edwards became the hero of the hour, and by his quiet, gentlemanly deportment won the admiration and respect of the passengers, who comprised some of the best and wealthiest of Boston society, returning from a visit to the Old World.

General James Mortimer was a wealthy patrician, who had been abroad with his daughter for his health.

Anna was not a beauty, but she had a quiet, dignified grace which, with a gentle loving disposition, made her the queen of many a heart.

She was not engaged, though she had many suitors.

As they drove up to their home on their arrival—the news of her miraculous escape having preceded her—the servants met them with a smile of thankfulness on their faces.

They were old and trusted servants.

Anna and her father entered the library, where, handing her a note, said, "Mrs. Edwards gave me this note as I was leaving the vessel; it is for you."

"Miss Anna Mortimer: Please say to your father that upon reflection I have gratefully concluded to decline his invitation to accept his hospitality. Circumstances interesting to you preclude the possibility of my availing myself of the honor he has conferred on me.

"With heartfelt acknowledgments of your kindness, very respectfully yours,

"SAMUEL EDWARDS."

"Oh, papa, this is too bad! What has happened?" was all Anna could say, disappointment and regret in her voice; for during the last few days of the voyage the young people had been much together, and from admiring her hero she had come to find him indispensable to her happiness.

all, yet that letter she guarded with a jealous care.

Her love-dream was not over; she had grown stronger, more resolute, and more than ever convinced that with him and him only could she be happy.

Her father knew nothing of her trouble; he knew only that she had changed.

From being a lively, childlike girl she had grown to be a woman with a purpose, who had set out to accomplish a task, and was determined to do it.

To-night a gay assemblage met at her residence.

Great painters and musicians were there, and all were commingling in the joy and pleasure of the hour.

Men and women told of struggles, of privations, of exertions that had brought them to their goal, and all felt they were bound by tie of success and past adversity.

"I am glad to hear you, Mr. Rapallo, that the paintings of that new artist, Mr. Gordon, have scored a success. I believe you told me he had been offered five thousand dollars for a single picture."

"Yes, Mrs. Adams, not only has he been offered a handsome price for the painting, but I understand that the art society of Liverpool have offered him an additional sum for a copy of it."

"What is the subject of the picture, Mr. Rapallo?" asked Anna.

"It is a marine scene: a young struggling with the waves, and her rescue by a sailor—Are you ill, Miss Mortimer?"

"No, sir—only a spasm—I am subject to them. But about the picture, who did you say was the artist?"

"I believe his initials are Samuel E. But you are certainly ill, Miss Mortimer."

"She had arisen from the table where they were sitting, and exclaiming herself for a moment, passed into another room.

A Piano to Wind Up.

This story is told by the Fat Contributor: Said a man approaching an exhibitor of pianos at Exposition Hall, "I have heard of a new fangled piano that winds up, and I want to get one of them. Do you sell such an instrument?"

"You mean a music box?"

"Maybe. Does a music-box wind up?"

"Oh, yes; a child can work it easily. Can cause it to play all day long if you like."

"Oh, I've got one of them now. You mean that kind you bang with your fingers?"

"No; a music box winds up as a clock, then it plays until it runs down, then you wind it up again, see?"

"That isn't the kind of wind up I mean. I want one that winds up its music as a man winds up his business. I don't care whether it quits on account of failing health, retired with a competency, or makes an assignment, so that it winds up. I've got one of the kind you have here and it never fails. I have seven daughters and they are all learning to play. I've paid a music teacher pretty near twenty dollars to teach my oldest girl, and she's teaching No. 6, No. 6 is instructing No. 5, and so on down, and it takes all day and half the night to go the rounds."

"No, sir—only a spasm—I am subject to them. But about the picture, who did you say was the artist?"

"I believe his initials are Samuel E. But you are certainly ill, Miss Mortimer."

"She had arisen from the table where they were sitting, and exclaiming herself for a moment, passed into another room.

Hastily taking a telegraph form, she wrote:

S. E. GORDON, artist, Edinburgh: I will give ten thousand dollars for your marine view; I must have it. Answer. ANNA MORTIMER."

She dispatched this to a telegraph office and rejoined the company. She seemed a different woman; her features were an anxious, long expression, as if she was expecting the Sunday law and all the legal holidays? You ought to have something of that kind."

"But we haven't. I'll tell you what I do. Put a combination lock on your piano and forget the combination. I'll do it, sure. Thousand times obliged to you. Can't you run out and take some things?"

Age of Enlightenment. In an age of enlightenment like the present, the value of electricity, and of compounds containing an electric principle as remedial agents, is widely appreciated.

Foremost among the latter, both as regards the thoroughness and safety of its effects, and the rapidity of its action, is "Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil," a widely popular external and internal remedy for coughs, colds, sore throat, asthma, croup, and other affections of the breathing organs.

It is a prompt source of relief for lame back, soreness and contraction of the muscles, and every variety of sore or bruise; a prompt source of relief for rheumatism, neuralgia, piles and kidney complaints, inflammatory affections, dysentery, and many other ailments. Its persistent use eradicates the most obstinate of the disorders to which it is adapted. Physicians speak of it in the highest terms. Moreover, horsemen and stock raisers administer it with the greatest success for diseases and hurts of horses and cattle.

RACKED BY INNUMERABLE PAINS, tortures by day, sleepless at night, rising unrefreshed in the morning, with aching limbs, and pestered by varying and perplexing symptoms, the dyspeptic takes indeed a gloomy view of human existence. For him the rest of life seems gone. Heartburn, oppression at the pit of the stomach, and the attendant annoyances of constipation and biliousness, combine to render him utterly wretched. But there is, if he will but take advantage of it, a reliable source of relief from all this misery. NORTHOPE & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY AND DYSPEPTIC CURE is, as its name imports, a vegetable preparation, free from mineral poison, and an all-sufficient remedy for the indigestion in its most obstinate form. It not only cures the blood by enabling the digestive organs to convert the food received into nutriment, but it cures the system by increasing the action of the bowels and kidneys, the natural outlets for its impurities. But while it relaxes the bowels, it never acts so violently and with pain, like a drastic cathartic. It acts, but never forces. Nature, invigorating as well as purifying and regulating the system, it thoroughly removes those diseased humors which tend to vitiate the blood, purifies the urinary secretion, and promotes a flow of healthy bile into the natural channel, besides expelling it from the circulation. Experience has proved that this is a medicine in a fact, a powerful remedy for dyspepsia, eczema, erysipelas, salt rheum, lumbago and all impurities of the blood. Price, $1.00. Sample Bottle, 10 cents. Ask for NORTHOPE & LYMAN'S "Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure," the wrapper bears the name of the proprietor, and is signed by him.

The MEDICAL FACULTY were among the first to recognize the value of NORTHOPE & LYMAN'S Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda as a remedy for throat and lung affections, premature decline and generally debilitated. Physicians not only recommend it for incipient consumption, bronchitis, asthma, and all pulmonary affections, but also for the treatment of rheumatism, neuralgia, and all other troubles, but speak in the highest terms of its efficacy as a means of enriching the blood and counteracting a hereditary tendency to consumption. In every part of the Dominion and throughout the United States it has attained a popularity as wide-spread as its merits. It is absolutely pure and does not nauseate the stomach; while the Hypophosphites, superadded to it, and chemically blended with the oil, renders it a powerful invigorating and complete restorative of health and manly vigor. Under its most desirable in diseases involving such a tremendous waste of tissue and loss of bodily substance as incipient consumption, which it checks with a promptitude truly marvellous. In addition to its pulmonary effects, it imparts tone to the whole system, and being a fine blood purifier, counteracts a tendency to scrofula. Moreover, it is sold at a reasonable price, the cost of the smaller bottles (the contents of one often sufficing to break up a bad cold) being 50 cents, and of the larger, $1.00. H. Gladwin, West Sheffield, P. Q., writes: "For a number of years I have been afflicted with rheumatism. Two years ago I was attacked very severely. I suffered a great deal of pain, from which I was not free for a day, until last spring, when I began to use Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, and I rejoice to say it has cured me, for which I am thankful."

Two babies were born in the same house at Oakland, Tenn. The mothers were sister-in-laws, resembling each other, and the infants were both girls. In the excitement of the occasion the little ones got mixed. Three months have passed without developing any resemblance to the father in either. The present question is to decide the question by lot.

Bells—"So you were engaged to—Bellevue, I see. I was very honorable, I am sure; and as for me, Augustus—Oh well, what's the use of making a secret? Father says our house is going to suspend payment before March, and I knew one of you, I believe, would not act with me then, and things would have been all right again."—Life.

A little fellow three years old, who had never eaten breaded soup, asked at the tea table for a piece of that "cake with plastering on it."

Suffering Children. Many children live of suffering from being brought up with Worms. Molasses Worm Syrup is as effective as well as a pleasant remedy. At nearly all stores.
