For 21 years "Devil's Auction" has made its annual tour, and still is seems to draw. While staged apparently elaborately, it was not put on by any stronger company than usually appears in this production. The music of course, has been changed and new songs take the place of old ones, but they are not particularly bright ones The best of them were not sung to best advantage, as the soloists and their support were not strong. The vaude ville element was pleasing, so far as it is possible for that style of acting to please when thrown together with music, as the "Devil's Auction" and such medlies are.
