BRANTS STILL WINNING

Emmer's Homer Brought Flints' Only Tally.

SAGINAW, July 24 .- Saginaw celebrated its return home for its first home game of the second half season of the Mint League by beating Hamilton, 4 to 3, before one of the biggest crowds of the season. Gillenwater did not allow a hit until the sixth when O'Pourke's double and Corcoran's single gave Hamilton a score. Singles by Morphy and Anderson, Kirby's triple and Iedson's double gave Saginaw three runs in the first inning. In the eighth Hayford's single, a pass, an er-ror and an infield out produced what proved to be the winning run. Hamilton threatened in the ninth, scoring twice on three singles, a sacrifice and n infield out but Behan, pinch-hitting, failed, grounding to Pike for the third

MAINES WILL USE ARMORED TRAIN ON NEXT TRIP THROUGH LONDON IS THE LATEST DOPE

As the International steamed into the Grand Trunk Saturday night around nine o'clock, no less a personage than George T. Maines, fresh from big conquests in Hamilton, stepped out on the platform. The London team were leaving for Port Hur on and accompanying them to the station were a number of the directors of the club, fans, Crichlow, who had a sort of hunch "Mistah" Maines might be en route, the Bay City Wolves and Umps. John O'Hearne.

They saw Maines just about the time he saw them. If they had happened to be a minute late in seeing George, they wouldn't have seen him at all, but as it was, George seeing that they saw him first, decided to remain on his dignity as president of the Mint League and one of the steps of the coach, and stand pat. George is a great little stand-patter. George had no illusions about this little delegation from the first moment. Fresh, as we said, from much hand-shaking and ice-cream-coning his way into the hearts of the Hamilton fans, George's system was too highly sensitive to the symptoms of public acclaim to be deluded for a moment into thinking that this was any wild clamor of welcome. And as soon as he could make out what the crowd was saying there wasn't any chance for him to make such a mistake. George has heard his umps abused, but the gems of language flung at his staff from time to time were as honeyed en-dearments to what fell on the Mint prexy's shell-like ears in a deluge. There may have been a few things left unsaid in the hurry of the moment by the crowd, but the Mint prexy got enough to get the drift of feeling in this locality as far as he is concerned.

Looked Like Trouble at Times. Maines' face blanched at times, when the heated words of the group surrounding him conjured up visions of straw-hatted form dangling from one of the rafters of the rain shelter, of the old Grand Trunk edifice, but he steadily threw back into the faces of his inquisitors, that he wouldn't reinstate Crichlow; "Not until he apologized to Umpire Delave." "I offered to apologize to Umps Delave once," Crichlow shouted ou above the mob scene. "He wouldn't take it and I won't apologize no more." The old toot of the engine didn't stop the argument, but the train pulling out did. The ticket holders climbed aboard, the rest drifted away from the scene of riot. Maines got audience for one brief moment, when he said that "His whole staff of umps would quit if he reinstated Crichlow.

Maines' "two-gun" umps, Delave, the cause of all the trouble was on the train too, but he didn't horn into the welcome at all, nor try to help his boss out. It was just as well, as there'd probably been one passenger left when the train finally did pull out.
