Juniors Will Make Big Bid For Favor of Rugby Fans

20 C. I. Students Get First Season's Look At Oval, and Prospects Are Bright.

The first real rugby workout has been ered for Saturday afternoon at 2:30 at Tecumseh Park. A coach has not yet been appointed, but the workout supervision of Messrs. Judd, Fisher and Duffield. The latter, known in private life as Bill, will look after the line work, and Fisher and Judd will look after the Most of the candidates have old uniforms, and they are urged to take them along, as there may be some muddy doings.

Manager Bill Friend and Niven Jidd will represent the intermediate and funior teams of the L. A. A. A. at the annual meeting of the O. R. F. U. in Toronto on Saturday.

Rugby workouts aren't going to proceed very far before the juniors will demonstrate that the big brother intermediates will have to hustle into real shape to hold the spotlight with them. Fractically the whole of the Ells' team last year are intact, and Reg. Baird, stocky plunger of the Central Collegiate; Rechnitzer of Western University last year; Loveless and a host of other good youngsters will be bidding for places on the team.

St. Thomas will be in the junior group.

I had a perfect night of sleep after my journey here from Atlantic City. In the morning, after I awoke and had my breakfast, I took a walk on Riverside Drive, and had a rubdown when I returned to the apartment where I am staying. Then I slept again for a little time, and near noon I walked down Broadway with some friends and had lunch at a restaurant. During the early part of some friends and had lunch at a restaurant. When I remember the dangerous things that I have done in my life I smile to hear that anyone believes I would have fear of fighting a man in the ring with gloves on his fists. Once I crossed the Andes in midwinter on foot. That was indeed danger. I had then not the gloved fists of a man to fear, but the might of snowslides, and I say with truth that I was not afraid then. Why should I have fear now?

And yet I am told that they have dropped from three to one to two to one. How can this be? Why don't these men who are so absolutely sure that I have no chance to win sell all they have and bet their money against me? Can it be possible that when they say that I have no chance they are expressing wish rather than a positive belief? Who knows? At

New York, Sept. 13.—I pick Jack
Dempsey to knock out Luis Firpo inside If an army mule were in a match

If an army mule were in a match race with Zev, our champion three-year-oid, who races Papyrus, Englaud's best, next month at Belmont Park, would you bet on the former? Then don't bet on Firpo. But if you are inclined to wager, place your money on Dempsey. Of course, there have been a lot of sure things go wrong at the track, just as there have been in the ring, but when you are betting you can't be looking for accidents.

True, in a race between Zev and an army mule, Zev might break his leg, or something like that, and the army mule go plugging along and win, but its an awful long-shot to put over. I liken Firpo to an army mule because he has got the kick of one, but not the speed of a Zev—which is Dempsey.

Speed is William Harrison Dempsey's middle name. He is such a bundle of energy that he is on the go every minute of the time. He doesn't know what it is to stop—at least, he hasn't known up to date. From the information I have gleaned from the two camps, Dempsey will rush at Luis from the clang of the bell. He will be all over him, shooting punches with deadly accuracy. He has short, snappy punches that have tremendous ferce behind them.
