London merchants are not responsible for the protest, although several of them acknowledged that they had wired their protests as individuals. The first and loudest protests have come from outside the city. Sarnia was particularly emphatic in its claim that the new tax would only add to the already heavy burden of he businessman.

Requests have been received in London from Sarnia and other cities cequesting support. It was said that the London Chamber of Commerce had already wired its protest. Sam Rowed, local automobile dealer ointed out that the merchants, as ody, ought to take any contemplated action immediately. "Two weeks after the act has been effective is no time to protest," he claimed. "When the sales tax went nto effect, I and sevoral others went o Ottawa about it, and we were told hat we should have protested before the act went into eect.'

Some of the merchants were in favor of having the "Shop in London Week" take the through place of the Dollar Day, which was not meet with general favor, ever, and it was decided to hold the Dollar Day on Thursday of the week previous to the Motor Show, then go ahead with a big week in co peration with the officers of the Motor Show. compelled to take them off the market in order to present more serious demonstration to the trade, and perhaps irretrevable losses to all parties.

There was practically no real demand for more cattle during this week. The bulk of the comparitively small receipts of cattle were belated cars from the west, and these in most cases were cleared out at low prices, which probably meant losses to the western shippers. Prospects for the coming week are that while there may be a market for a few choice butcher cattle, there will be no active demand for thin and unfinished cattle.

The very light receipts of small stuff put a little strength into the market for a few choice lambs, while hogs made a 50c advance over the previous week's close.
