Any one at all conversant with the book trade will at once realize the uselessness of such a list as a check upon the buyer. One edi-tion of a book may be twenty times the price of another, and to send Mr. Bain to England with no more definite instructions than are embraced in the commission to buy this list without suy limit as to prices is simply to give him carte blanche. If the board really desired to encourage peculation and put a premium on jobbery they could hardly have hit upon a more effectual plan than by this loose and careless fashion of authorizing purchases. There does not seem to be sufficient oc-casion for sending Mr. Bain or anybody else to England on this mission. The great majority of the works required can be bought in Canada on equally advantageous terms and the few which will have to be purchased direct from English firms can be ordered through Canadian houses at much less expense than will be involved by this needless trip.
