What is to be Done?

What is to be Bone?

Butter making in Canada is unprofitable, except where it is engaged in scientifically. The production costs too much and the prices are too low. The distribution of labor will reduce the cest of production in this, as well as in other lines of business, and the establishment of creameries will improve the quality of the article. This is what is wanted—quality. The famous Greek described the first, second and third requisities of elecution as action, action, action. The dairynnen of Canada need to learn that quality, quality, quality, is the one hope of the butter trade. Under the creamery system three important features may be confidently looked forward to:

1. Production will cost less.
2. Prices will be higher.
3. The consumption will increase, it will cost less to produce butter because the distribution of habor idea. will be adopted. Prices will be higher because a better article will be produced. The consumption will increase because people will eat more good butter than bad butter.

There are already signs of hope that the Canadian butter trade will be built up again. The rule of thumb is giving place to the rule of reason. In 1883 there were only 27 creameries in Ontarlo, now there are 55. In Quebec there are about 200.

The productof these creameries does not nearly supply the home market for good butter. There is ample room for a large increase in the number of creameries in Canada, even if the country did not export a pound.

The Protestants of our country need just now to consider what is the difference between putting statue of the Madonna in Montreal Park by municipal law, and putting by the Provincial law, the symbols of our religious faith in the Ontario Public Schools. You say justly in rediction to the former, "It is an offence to Protestants, to Hebrews, to Agnostics, all of testants, to Hebrews, to Agnostics, all of whom, even though they constitute a minority, as public park rights and feelings are fority, and whose rights and feelings are out "Hebrews and Agnostics, all of whom, even though they constitute a minority, as even though they constitute a minority as even though they constitut

The truth that these figures teach is, that co-operation undoubtedly benefits a trade. The dairymen interested in the cheese business have joined together to advance their common interests, and what they have done has been profitable to themselves and greatly benefits to the country. These men have gone on steadily improving the product of their factories. They have been anxious to learn and ready to adopt new ideas. They have managed their new ideas are as general, rule pretty sugacious men, as the buyers know. This well-applied intelligence has brought Canadian cheese into good demand in Britain, insomuch that it has low ered the price of Cheshire, and the Yankees would fain ship all their cheese as "Canadian." The World is pleased with the success of the cheese manufacturers of Canada, and hopes those engaged in the butter business will follow in their footsteps.
