An olse in the street, a rush of many feet, a clattering fall.

A scaffolding on the house next door has given way, a clerk cried with a white face, and there are men killed. Nine or ten they say.

Nine or ten they say.

Nine or ten bricklayers, masons, carpenters, and one gentleman who was passing by, and in whose face the lawyer recognized the features of his late visitor.

Dead, with his scheme complete, bead, with his scheme complete, with his hand upon the wealth he had planned to win. Dead!

They carried him home to his young wife, and tenderly broke the truth to her. Even in the first shock she felt her heart recoil when the lawyer to had not loved him, but had she never known his baseness she could have mourned a kind friend lost. It was two years before Bert came to share her home, to be the husband of her heart, to fill the paradise her mother had painted. But in their happiness they gave Cyrus Worthington's name the charity of silence. Never is it spoken by the wife he deceived or the friend he wronged.

The long reign of cotton as king of field products is yearly diminishing in brilliancy and the time seems fast approaching when wheat will wield the commercial sceptre of American agriculture. There is at this day no production of the land that contains such elements of trade vitality as the single item of wheat. It has survived the most severe financial depression in this country and Europe and has steadily encouraged the farmer to enlarge the yield. The capitalist here and abroad is ever ready to give a solid indorsement to its value by the most liberal investments. It is, of course, subject to phases of inactivity and the consequent fluctuation in price, but the inevitable demand which is bound to follow consumption in an indespensable food item, always safely adjust this special one; a fact that is rapidly establishing a feeling of nuwavering confidence among all operators in breadstuffs.

Knowing the many resources that are naturally developing the greatness of this country, it is glorious to contemplate that we are destined to become the chief custodian of "the staff of life," that the enterprising producers will thereby be the recipient of worthy renumeration. It is certainly a gratifying fact when we see the United States in only their centennial year looming up in competition for European supples against the histofical prominence of old Egypt and Black Sea.

For present practical purposes one point has been very strongly brought out by the previous course of the wheat market which A GLANCE AT WHEAT.

Recipe for French Sour.—Take four pounds of the veiny part of rump of good beef, no fat, one pound of yeal off the leg, four carrots, two parsnips, four onions, one head of clery, four cloves. To be put on the coals—not over the fire—at eight of colock in the morning, and to boil slowly till two o'clock. When it begins to boil, add two table—spoonfuls of salt; no pepper One gallon of water.

Blanc-Mange (first-rate recipe).—Season one quart of rich cream to your taste, or say, put five ounces of sugar and ten drops of extract of vanilla, lemon, or rose. Whip the cream to a stiff froth. Pour one pint of cold water on one onne of isinglass; let it simmer on embers until perfectly dissolved. When lukewarm, pour the cream slowly in, beating it all the time, till stiff enough to drop from the spoon. Then put it in moulds.

Baked Plum-Pudding—One pint of grated bread crumbs, one pint of raisins or best dried cherries, three-quarters of a pint of sugar one pint of milk, three eygs, half a pint of chopped apples, and one nutmeg.

Put the milk on last. The eygs must be beaten very light, and stirred into it with enough four to make the mass stick together. Bake only half an hour, and serve with French sauce.

Bolland Pudding Pudding Without Eggs.—Two with French sauce.

Bolland Pudding Res.—Two with earth of the fish like so many
