

The number of patients increased 33 per cent., the mortality decreased over 50 per cent.

During the year the majority of the members of the visiting staff were asked to make special visits on account of the dangerous illness of some of their patients. In every instance that request was met with a ready response, and to this was due, in a large measure, the low mortality.

Respectfully submitted,

JAMES THIRD, Med. Supt