

The future of international law is directly connected with the degree to which differing legal philosophies can be harmonized. It is in this context that, I believe, our country, associating two major legal systems under one roof, can make a truly unique contribution."