

sides and one end
work; the other
y on a bier, the
ed by posts about
a mat, over which
a wooden mace,
ills; towards the
and finally dried
the ground, near
cocoa-nut; here
tree, and a stone
hung in strings at
stem of a palm-
upon which was
At the side of
e bag, with some
natives were not
their jealousy ap-
and gestures.

Solander made an
d it level and fer-
mules to the east-
d quite to the wa-
out into the sea.
inued about three
, abounding with
emed to enjoy a
place was render-
er illing from a
crossed this river,
arren, we resolved
o do, we were of-
hich some writers
many nations, but
of a dead white,
e not so white as
d beard were as
ed like those that
if he was near-
celive joy of Tu-
is not to be ex-

eral of the gentle-
ks, who had lost
Tamaide of hav-
at, occasioned him
He made signs,
, that if he had
s imputed to him,
But though he
y instances, that
much addicted to
at had mislaid the
roduced in a rag,

u were six swivels,
ndians seemed to
he fishermen re-
e marks of friend-
our people, they
at from the fort:
ubourai Tamaide
of his, who was a
dine with us, and
use in the wood.
complain to Mr.
atened to cut his
or barter a stone
rly that the offen-
der

A TOBAPPOW, with a CORPSE on it, surrounded by the OMA, in the Bay of Islands, New Brunswick.

London: Published for the Proprietors by Wm. H. & Co. at the Penny Press, 4, St. James's Street.