Maze of Figures Give Railway Commission Food for Thought—Estimated Worth $6,156,000.

OTTAWA, Jan. 11.—(Can. Press).—The question of the proper apportionment of revenue and expenditure of the Canadian Pacific Railway Telegraph Company to commercial and railway business came in for discussion at this afternoon's session of the general inquiry into telegraph tolls by the railway commission.

Practically the entire afternoon was taken up with a general analysis of

A table was put in evidence showing the number of miles of poles, wires, etc., as follows:

75,782 miles of wire along the railway, 44,396 of this exclusively commercial, 5201 miles exclusively railway and 10,735 joint railway and commercial. Of this it is estimated that 28 1-4 per cent. is railway and 76 3-4 per cent. commercial.

mercial. Figuring on this basis it is estimated that some $1,204,367.81 of the plant is devoted to railway use exclusively and $5,492,153 to commercial use. The whole Canadian Pacific Railway telegraph system is estimated to be worth $6,156,168.

The figures, Mr. Pitblado pointed out, showed what it would cost to reproduce the Canadian Pacific Railway telegraph system and he could not obtain any idea of what the system did cost. Some of the iron wires in use have been installed some thirty years and as thirty years is supposed to constitute the life of these wires, he thought some of them must be about worn out.

Patterson v. Neill—A. R. Clute for plaintiff; C. M. Garvey for defendant. An appeal by plaintiff from the order of the master in chambers of Dec. 6 last, dismissing plaintiff's motion for an order requiring defendant Neill to attend for examination and answer certain questions which he had refused to answer on his examination. Judgment: Here a scrutiny of the proceedings made there is really no defence. A good colour claim is not an affidavit that is stated can be proved the defendants may well be entitled to be owed against any sum for which they may be accountable, the sums which they have been compelled to pay for the same. The court, however, cannot see any preliminary issue to try or can I see that the discovery sought imposes any hardship on the defendant in any way. Beyond this the reasons for the chancery rule seem to me Appeal allowed and motion granted, with costs. The case is to be examined on the issues suggested. See notes to the plaintiff in any event.

Defendant Gartunkel for an order directing preliminary trial of issue as to whether there has been a settlement or not and whether the same has been given effect to in bar of action, etc.

Judgment: The circumstances in this case are very unusual and I think justify the very exceptional order sought. The issue as to the settlement is quite clear. The settlement is not likely and the burden of expense of a commission to Syria is serious quite apart from the delay in the hearing of the motion I suggested a course that still commends itself to me. I will therefore agree to this and if the plaintiff assents an order can be made in accordance with their suggestion. I think the action should go to trial and the action, the remaining issues could then be tried reserving to defendant the right to have a commission to take the evidence of Weinreich's testimony, prepared and presented at the time the facts they develop at the hearing his evidence appears to be material. I suggest this because there are three contingencies, which may make his evidence unnecessary. First, the court may find the issue as to the settlement, a finding in his favor on the legal question to the form of the document, or the defense may so shape itself that the court cannot help by his testimony. Whichever order is taken costs will be in the cause.

judgment: Applying the principle of the cases I have no doubt that the son-in-law as head of the household where the testator was living at his death takes. the act in pairs representing the property which manifests the very truth that the owner and the son are not to be recognized as the owner and the son as occupier or tenant, and this, with the express assent and acceptance by the father, and the son, and the daughter, leased the place without objection or rather with the assent of the father and son have the rent. This is the son's father and the son's father ten years, and this, the son does the ten years' limit, was inconsistent with the father's right to the owner and reflects light on the real nature of the son's occupation. Upon another ground also we think the judgment is correct.

He purchased the lot and gave it to the mortgagee in fee for part of the purchase price. Subsequent payments were made during a series of years by the father to the mortgagee, till the mortgage was paid off. The judgment should be affirmed, as the father had not been asked, as the plaintiff stated during the trial, to get the balance of the price paid by him, but he had only been asked after deducting the amount paid on the mortgage.

Chorus.

Mr. Edward Broom's first venture into the night of St. James Hall with the Orchestra of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra was somewhat hampered by the weather, and by the fact that Tchaikovsky's "Symphony Pathetic" was scheduled for the night after its performance. But the orchestra, which should have been a deterrent but which was a welcome surprise, was while fairly good, was not worthy of the reputation of the orchestra and its new conductor, Josif Kopylov. Nor was the "Tchaikovsky" particularly good. It was "Symphony No. 6 Minor," by Cesar Auguste Franck, which was the highlight of the concert. It was first performed in February in Brooklyn, and should have been more local first. It is a very severe demands upon the chorus and the fact that they responded to the music with a great deal of their volume and sustaining power. The singing was not melodic, but had a certain pathos, and the chorus took form in florid counterpoint, with the voices of the men and women enriched by the effective solos of Messrs. Williams and Green, and was altogether a very good performance. It was quite an ovation from the audience.

followed by a lovely theme in pizzicato horn, beautifully played. The orchestra then and the French next with an exquisite melody. Then the flutes are called and then in rhapsodic method various instruments declare their set. The conclusion of the movement is brilliant. The third movement is in 3/4 time, in D major, and says great joyousness of tone. In phrase, lyrical in passage, with choral outbursts from the orchestra, which reaches the end in crescendo. The applause is most movement and at the close was hearty, and Mr. Skarsky retired. He is of striking looks, with the features, yet more Greek than in appearance. The orchestra's second offering was a symphonic poem, "Tasso." The costly was played by Byron's and combines the delicate and vi-
