I write this first to say that the of the board have been discovered secondly to represent to your own dement as strongly as I can the necessity of the wishes of those whose we all are.

Engineer stands to his guns.
Engineer replied: am sorry that there should be such delving owing to the refusal of this delving to water Yonge-street. You state that the Board of Control ordered that method of watering the streets should be used. I have not yet received any advice. I have not yet received any advice from the Board of Control in connection with the matter regarding this matter. I must again state that I am not prepared to advise the constant watering of our streets, as it would not only be in the rapid deterioration of the asphalt, but would prove a source of considerable annoyance and danger to bicyclists, and a very large and important class of the population. I am entitled to equal consideration with the merchants. The reason for the watering of the streets is the fact that the fact that we have had over $100,000 this year in taking out the same with asphalt blocks. This has been largely through constant watering and in several American cities the same has happened.

Class, therefore, I receive an explicit order from the Board of Control or the City Council, ordering the constant watering of the streets, I must decline to take the responsibility of ordering the Street Commissioners to do this.

however, it is decided to water Yonge street, there is no doubt but the storekeeping and Queen-streets will not be watered, unless the same streets are also watered, this means, as I have already stated, injury to the asphalt pavement, and large increase in the cost of the street service."

ATTACKED BY A MAN-EATER

A Long Island Bather's Narrow Escape From Death.

Charles Boone Had His Right Thigh Horribly Lacerated by a Monster Shark-The Fish Shoved His Intended Victim Close to the Pier, When a Friend Seized Him.

New York, Aug. 26.—A monster shark in Prince's Bay opened and closed his jaws on Charles Boone, a visitor at Father Drumgoole's Home at Mount Loretta, Staten Island, Monday afternoon. Almost by a miracle Boone escaped instant death.

Boone is in the Smith Infantry now, with horrible lacerations on his right thigh. The surgeon says that he will survive his wounds unless septice poisoning sets in.

The young man is 22 years old and lives in New Jersey. He is studying for the priesthood in a Maryland college, and was spending his vacation at Mount Loretta with the guests of the Mission of the immaculate Conception.

One who is a good swimmer and very fond of the water, went to bathing about 1 o'clock in the afternoon off a small wharf, which is built out into the bay at the lower end of Staten Island. Charles Boone, a young man of his own age, was in the water with him.

White had swam ashore, and was standing on the edge of the wharf, when Boone began leisurely swimming in.

There was a sudden rush beneath the swimmer, a misty force that seemed to lift him up on a huge wave, the gleam of a white belly, one glimpse of a monster jaw, with shining white teeth, and then Boone felt a savage pull at his right leg.
He was near the wharf, and the big fish had pushed him nearer. He grasped a timber and swung himself clear of the water and white grabbed him.

Boone when pulled on to the wharf looked at once behind him, but the monster disappeared as he looked. White had seen the encounter, and began to question his companion at once.

"It was a shark," said Boone. "I saw him. I guess he nipped me." He tried to stand up and nearly collapsed. As he sank fastening to the ground, white saw blood all over his thigh. The sea water had restrained his flow, and the shock had come to Boone all at once when he had reached a place of safety.

Cut Fourteen Inches Long.

On the inside of Boone's right thigh was a cut 14 inches long that looked as if it had been made with a knife. A great flap of flesh had been taken out. On the outside of the leg there were the marks of 20 teeth in a long row. Each tooth had pressed into the flesh from half an inch to an inch in depth. Blood flowed from every cut. There was also a lateral tear of the flesh, corresponding in length to the vicious imprint of the shark's teeth and parallel to it. Boone had lost a great quantity of blood.

He suffered great agony during the time elapsing between his first falling on the wharf and his arrival at the hospital.
There the surgeons put him under the influence of ether, and dressed his wounds with the greatest care. The two great gashes in the flesh of the thigh required 40 stitches and antiseptic dressings were piled high on the right holes on the outside of the leg made by the shark's jaw.

Deep Laceration on the Thigh.

The femoral artery was exposed, so deep thigh. Had it been deeper, Boone would have bled to death. At midnight Monday was resting quietly under the influence of morphia. Trained nurses were beside him all night.

Mr. White, his companion, was overcome with horror at the experience, and not until evening was he sufficiently recovered to speak about it.

"It all came so suddenly," he said, "that I hardly had time to realize the danger.
Boone was in the water and I was all over.
I was standing at the end of the wharf, getting ready for a dive. He had been swimming about ten minutes, I should judge, and I had come ashore to dry myself in the sun and then plunge into the water again. My friend was not far out and I was watching him.

Deadly Glean of White.

"I saw a great gleam of white almost directly under him. The big fish must have visited to Toronto as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Thomas.

While here he had taken the opportunity of interviewing him. Mr. Thomas occupies a unique position, being the largest individual bicycle manufacturer in the world. He has a power workshop, and is very few, as his rulings and decisions affect the cycling trade, wherever bicycles are made or ridden. Mr. Thomas, when asked regarding his Canadian investment at Toronto Junction, stated that he was more than pleased with the results, which have fulfilled all his desires, and further states that the present facilities are totally inadequate, owing to the increased business which the Junction has received every year in this country, and notwithstanding the proposed alterations and extensions which are already under way, he has decided to actually further increase the same, plans for which are being prepared.

When asked what induced him to establish a factory in Canada, he replied that the fact that there was a general development to be had, and knowing that the country would be very prosperous, that its development would be rapid, and its prosperity greatly increased.

Asked what he thought of the future of Canada, he replied: "As previously stated, I based my investment in Canada upon the future prosperity, which is now being realized, and an established fact that this continent is to control the steel industries of the world and there is no reason why, if the conditions between Canada and the United States are equalized, Canada should not do this share."
