HAMILTON, Sept. 24.—(Special.)—The three Italians accused of trying to work the "Black Hand" game on Salvatore Sanzone, this afternoon decided to leave their fate in the hands of a judge without a jury. Their names are Carmelo Colombo, Ernest Speranza and Samuel Wolfe, and it is charged that they demanded money from Sanzone and assaulted and attempted to kidnap him. They have retained T. C. Fogarty, K.C., Toronto, and it is likely the trial will take place next week. It is said that one firm of lawyers wanted $1500 to defend them and another $1000, and that they offered one lawyer $250 if he succeeded in establishing their innocence.

More Police Needed.

Chief Smith says that he has not enough men to cope with the foreigners, and to stamp out the stabbing affairs. He has 70 men, or one for about every 1000 inhabitants, and he says he needs at least 100, as he cannot spare any officers for the east end of the city where the foreigners are located until after 11 o'clock at night. He would like the city divided into two police districts, and a re-organization of the force.

The Cataract Company has again killed the city for 720 horsepower at $15 a year, that being the minimum which was set by the contract put thru the council last year. The city will not pay the bill, and will fight the company in the courts if it tries to collect them.

John Berlinghoff has warned the contractor who gathers the milk from the houses in the city to give two of his horses a rest.

The Relation of the Advertising Agency to Mining

(Reprinted from New York Commercial)

This column has a distinct educational value to businessmen, because it gives them ideas on advertising that they can utilize.

The following contribution on the relation of the advertising agent to mining propositions, by F. F. Burgin, treasurer of a well-known mining company, is submitted to The New York Commercial for the purpose of offering a few suggestions as to how the advertising agent can raise the standard of mining advertising, and not as the opinion of an expert.

The advertising agent can raise the standard of mining advertising if he will oppose exaggeration in the statements of promoters, and carefully consider the difference between a stock that can be recommended for investment and one that is purely speculative. When a mine is not paying dividends, and the managers are still selling stock to meet expenses, it is necessary to investigate producing mines that are well managed by men of recognized ability, and learn that permanency of the ore body is reasonably assured, we feel that the proposition is an investment. To feel confidence in the property we need assurances as to the identity of the promoters, engineers and officials, and publicity as to the financial affairs of the company and its properties. There is no good reason why these facts cannot be fully exploited by the advertising agent, and the investor is thereby protected from fake enterprises.

PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY is an important safeguard. Who are the men back of the enterprise? If it is a corporation, let the names of the directors and officials be printed, and their identity established. It has been suggested that corporations be registered at Albany, and the addresses of the directors and officers kept on file in order to give investors a means of learning the identity of the promoters, and that the new corporation clause requiring such registration by a corporation before doing business in the state. The object of such a law would be to minimize the harm that might be done by favors using dummies in selling worthless stock.

Publicity is the second feature of mining enterprises that the advertising agent can use to advantage in protecting the public. If he can induce the promoters of companies which he represents to keep the stockholders informed of the condition of the company, the advertising agent will find that he is winning public confidence with every announcement he makes. He has a broad field to work in, because he has the physical condition of the property to report upon, as well as the condition of the finances. Announcements concerning the development of the mine lead to important results, marketed, so far as the stockholder is concerned. Reading matter here becomes more important than advertising. The specialist in mining news who supplies the newspapers with facts about the shipments, new ore bodies, and smelter returns, is a most valuable factor in arousing public interest. How

T.N.O. Clerks on Strike.

On Thursday night over twenty-five clerks and warehousemen on the T. & N. O. quit, or as they put it, began a sympathetic strike on account of the change of agent at Cobalt station. When interviewed J. L. Englehart, chairman of the T. & N. O. commission, says he saw no justification for the strike, and added that the places of the strikers would be immediately filled.
