A NOTABLE ADDRESS.

The most interesting portion of the address of Rev. Dr. Gordon (Ralph Connor) before the Rotary Club yesterday was that which related to the application of the golden rule in disputes between capital and labor. He told of the Council of Industry formed in Winnipeg after the great strike and of its very effective work. He himself is the chairman and labor and capital each have two representatives. In two years seventy disputes have been brought before this council, and in not one case has it failed to arrange a settlement. Each party to the dispute is encouraged to make a clean breast of it, so that each side of the dispute may be presented from every angle in an atmosphere designed to bring the parties together so that each may get the view-point of the other, and each may be led to see that there are really two sides to the question. Getting the disputants together in such an atmosphere goes a long way toward smoothing away the difficulties, and Dr. Gordon regards the record of the Winnipeg Council of Industry as proof that industrial relations may be adjusted when passion, prejudice and self-interest are subordinated to the larger purpose of co-operation for the common good of all. The speaker extended the application of the principle to the relations between nations, as the only means of ensuring peaceful progress.

That was also a striking distinction Dr. Gordon made between the business of getting a living and the business of living. The former was incidental, and the latter was the real enterprise. Not getting and spending, but building character, is the real task. It is well that there are voices like that of the preacher-novelist to mark the distinction and direct the minds of men to the higher aspects of human responsibility and duty.

GETTING TOURISTS.

The people of New Brunswick are frequently reminded of the wealth that is poured into the neighboring state of Maine every year by tourists. The annual expenditure is now estimated at $40,000,000. It has also been pointed out that Maine has nothing in regard to climate, scenery, fish and game, and now good roads, which New Brunswick may not also offer. What we chiefly lack is hotel accommodation and better provision for visiting anglers, but even with present conditions we ought to do a much better business than in the past. Maine is not satisfied with what she has got, but is going after more. She knows that in other New England states and in Central Canada there is a host of persons with money to spend on vacation during the hot season, and she is luring them to her resorts. The Bangor Commercial tells how the thing is done, and it is worth while for New Brunswick people to read and perhaps profit by the reading. Last Friday's Commercial said:

"Remarkable returns are being received from the advertising campaign inaugurated by the State of Maine Publicity Bureau in a score or more of the leading newspapers throughout New England, eastern United States and Canada. The first advertisement appeared last Sunday, and on Monday nearly 200 letters had been received at the headquarters, Longfellow Square, asking for information about Maine and for places at which to spend vacations. On Tuesday the number of letters ran over 300, and the indications are that the 1,500 mark will be exceeded before the week is over. Next Sunday an entirely new advertisement appears, and this will undoubtedly start a new deluge of correspondence, and other large display advertisements are to be run during the next six weeks."

"Executive Secretary and Treasurer John C. Scates, in charge of the Bureau, is having great difficulty to keep up with the correspondence, even with two assistants, but is, however, successfully taking care of each inquiry. The new headquarters in Longfellow Square, Portland, is rapidly being fitted up, and it will be officially opened just as soon as its furnishing is completed. The lower floor, or main office, will have counters for the giving out of information, individual desks so that visitors may write souvenir cards, or letters, a large stationary seat for those obliged to wait, racks for pamphlets, and various other features of up-to-date equipment. The State Fish and Game Commission has agreed to assist in decorating the interior of this office, and the department is now preparing at Augusta, an elaborate display of mounted fish and wild game for this purpose. The main floor of the Bureau has five large show windows, which are being appropriately lettered, and some artistic signs are being constructed for the outside of the building."

"On the second floor the front office, located on the corner of State and Pine streets, is being used by the clerical force of the Bureau, while the next room beyond, on State street, will be artistically fitted up as a ladies' rest room for tourists and those who visit the Bureau. The adjoining room has most valuable community work."

been taken over by the Maine Automobile Association in order to be conveniently located so that its sources of information may be utilized to the fullest extent by the Bureau. It is expected that the headquarters will be ready for the official opening early in June, and a state-wide committee has been appointed to arrange a programme for this event.

"The Bureau will be open every day of the year for the purpose for which it has been established, and frequent publicity and advertising campaigns will be conducted in advance of the various seasons, which include the summer tourist, fall hunting, winter sports and spring fishing. In addition, every effort will be made by the Bureau to extend Maine's summer tourist season by including people from away to come earlier in the summer and stay later."

Maine is looking to Canada for tourists, and deems it worth while to advertise for them in this country as well as in the United States. What pays so well in Maine as to warrant the Bureau described by the Commercial would pay equally well in this province. Our climate and scenic attractions, our fish and game, are not affected by tariff, and the tariff is not a barrier to western competition. They represent a perennial source of wealth that only calls for accommodation for visitors and such publicity as Maine gives. Why not exploit this source of wealth to the utmost?

Sir George Foster is a great Canadian, then whom none is better qualified to discuss the League of Nations. It is a subject worthy of the finest brain and the most fervent oratory. The Dominion of Canada is a member of the League of Nations. The war brought about that result. The whole aspect of our relations to the world at large has been changed. Mr. Lloyd George was proud to be able to tell parliament last week that the representatives of the Dominions sat with him at Genoa, and were one with the mechanized world striving for world peace. In our absorption in federal, provincial and municipal problems we must not lose sight of the imperial relation and the new status of Canada as a member of the League of Nations.

Never before has there been so good a prospect for the organization of a vigorous Improvement League in West St. John as now exists. There is need of a thoroughly representative group of citizens pledged to community welfare work with special reference to the needs of the young people. The presence of west side members of the Rotary Club at last night's meeting is a hopeful indication. The League has good officers, under the chairmanship of Mr. W. R. Scully, M. P., and deserves universal support. The work of the three other Improvement Leagues sets a good pace and a worthy goal.

Horatio Bottomley has been sentenced to seven years penal servitude for misappropriating very large sums of money which people, mostly poor, invested in the Victory Bond Club. This man traded on the sympathies of the people. As a journalist he was ever ready to pour ridicule upon the rich and the titled, and to pose as the friend of the poor and oppressed. Men of his type are found everywhere. He was even able to gain a seat in parliament. In the end has come exposure and punishment. The story is not without its moral.

The Standard fears that somebody will be "duped" by the Times. This journal has no such estimate of its own powers, even if it had the inclination to dupe anybody, nor does it regard the citizens of St. John as of the gullible sort. It believes they will not fall for the blandishments of the New Brunswick Power Company, or be frightened by imaginary terrors conjured up for a purpose that is very clear.

St. John has a Gyro Club. This is an international association, and in all cities where established, it is doing a valuable community work. The Gyro Club of Halifax has interested itself in the welfare of boys who do not enjoy the same privileges as the boys of well-to-do parents.

Canada's revised tariff has attracted a great deal of attention in the United States. The prospect of losing a good deal of trade with their best customer does not make the tariff bill now before congress quite as attractive as it was, even to the hard-bitten Republicans.

An Ottawa rumor is to the effect that Mr. George B. Jones, M. P., is mentioned as a possible Conservative leader in New Brunswick. Now what is the matter with Leader Palmer? And why Mr. Jones?

The Victorian Order of Nurses in this city is doing splendid work. Among their varied activities it now conducts baby clinics in four sections of the city and in connection therewith is doing a Lesson No. 13.

The previous lesson explained the manner in which the expanding or contracting lines of force in a coil of wire induced electromotive force and current in another closed coil of wire placed in close proximity to the first. This property is known as MUTUAL INDUCTION and is an important factor in the transfer of electrical energy between coils which have no electrical connection.

There is another phenomenon which takes place in a circuit when there is an increase or decrease of current in a coil of wire. This property is known as SELF INDUCTION and may be explained as follows: When current flows in the turns of a coil of wire, it creates a magnetic field about each turn. If the current increases, the magnetic lines of force in each turn expand and cut the adjacent turns of the coil. The cutting of these turns generates in them an electromotive force which opposes the original electromotive force of the original current. In other words, a counter electromotive force is induced which tends to prevent the increase of the original current.

If, on the other hand, the original current in the coil diminishes and the lines of force in the magnetic field about each turn contract, this contraction causes the lines of force to cut the adjacent turns and induce an electromotive force which opposes the reduction of the original current.

In both cases, therefore, the effect of self-induction is to oppose a change in the strength of the current either when it tends to increase or decrease.

Due to the fact that a direct current is normally steady, self-induction occurs principally at the beginning or end of the flow of current. In alternating current circuits, however, through which the current flows back and forth, the property of self induction is very prominent.

The self induction of a coil of wire is much greater than that of a straight conductor and if the coil of wire is provided with a soft iron core instead of an air core, the lines of force find a much easier path through the iron and the self induction is greatly increased.

The following lesson will explain how the principle of electromagnetic induction is made use of in the alternating current transformer of the radio transmitter.

HOMESICKNESS.

(Rev. George Scott.)

Oh, some time my feet will follow
Where my heart goes out today,
Down the pathway through the hollow
Where the sparkling waters play,
In the stillness of the morning,
When the skies are gold and gray.

For the breezy days are calling,
Come ye back across the seas,
Where the glorious nautic sailing
Glides the daisies on the leas,
And the throbbing in the planting
Raises their gladness melody.

To the hills of purple heather,
And the corn for harvest home,
Where hand in hand together
We were walking long ago,
Where the bonny broom was golden,
And the sweet primroses grow.

To the days of childish pleasures,
And the dulcet Doric speech,
And the lifting homely measures,
All the long lone strains that reach
Through the weary years of exile
And seductive yearnings teach.

Yes, some day I mean to follow
Where my heart shall be at rest,
I shall leave the world behind me,
All these years of idle quest,
All the strain of fierce endeavor
In the land that I love best.

BARGAIN BASEMENT AT THE OAK HALL OPENS THURSDAY

Oak Hall definitely announce that their new bargain basement department will open Thursday. Although all their new merchandise has not arrived, still there are so many excellent bargains now available, that they are anxious to deprive the public of these fine opportunities any longer.

On the opening day there will be wonderful assortments of gingham dresses, Normandy dresses, dresses of silk and other materials; sport skirts that will be a revelation at their low prices; blouses in great array; coats of superior values at low prices; undershirts and bloomers. These are the lines that have so far arrived for women. Such lines as hosiery, sweaters, white wear, etc., unfortunately have been delayed in transit. They may be here for the opening; but even if they do not arrive, the values that will be offered in the larger garments, fully warrant Oak Hall throwing this department open to the public. Besides the women's wear, there will be offered kiddies' coats, boys' coats, suits, men's pants, shirts, hosiery, pyjamas.

Altogether this will be an attractive department that will save considerable money to its patrons, and the various lines that will be offered Thursday will be so attractive that one must assuredly plan to visit this bargain basement department early in the morning and thus avoid what is bound to be a heavy afternoon rush. Announcements will be made by Oak Hall in Wednesday evening papers.

FAILED TO DROWN BEAR.

Minnesota. Woodsmen, Swimming, Couldn't Pull Bruin Under.

Hibbing, Minn., May 30.—A battle with a bear in deep water was described by two woodsmen who came to Hibbing out of the woods along Sturgeon River to get medical treatment.

The men, Ole Hendrickson and James Kinney, swam up behind the bear and tried to pull him under the water by his back legs to drown him. They held on for ten minutes, and were cuffed, bruised, scratched and half drowned. They had to let go and the bear swam on.
