

Arts, Engineering faculties move in

With the completion of the new Humanities Centre and the Mechanical Engineering building, a number of arts and engineering offices have been moved. In the Humanities Centre (left), are the departments of classics, religious studies, philosophy, English, and the offices of the dean of arts. New occupants of the Mechanical Engineering building are the departments of mechanical engineering, technical services drafting, technical services microscope repair, as well as the technical services general office. The office of the dean of engineering (right) and some for the university Senate have also been moved into the Mechanical Engineering building. New phone and office numbers can be found in the Directory.
