Sun, sand, surf, warmth and hospitality on beautiful Andros Island in the Bahamas - only 15 minutes from Nassau.

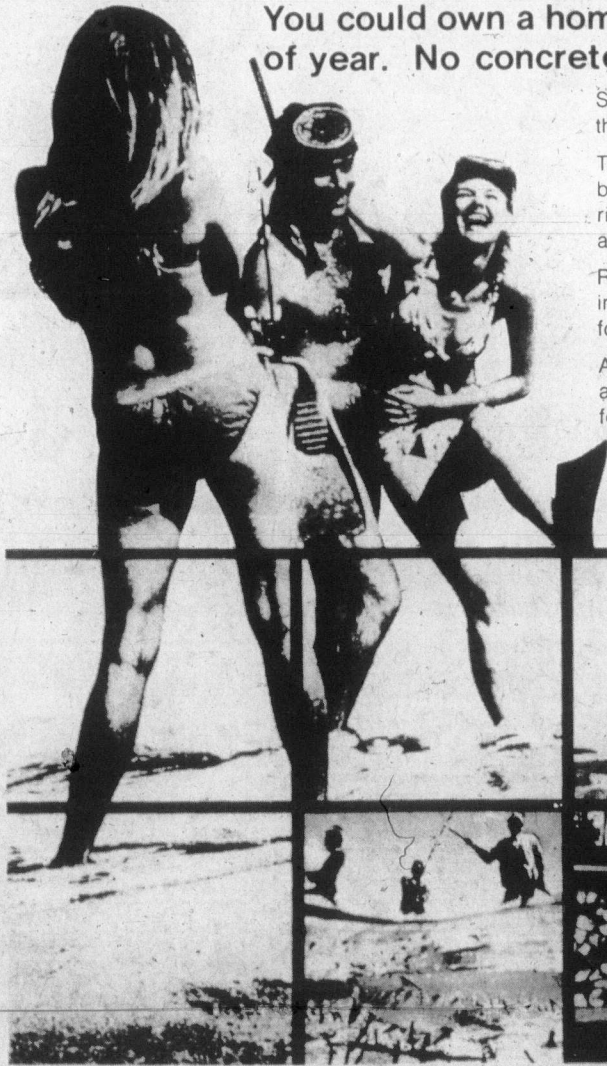

Unhurried Forget today's hectic pace of life! Step back in time to enjoy the homespun graciousness of Andros Island. Only 136 miles from the North American continent, it presents an enormous sense of removal from time and place. Well-known travel writer James McLendon aptly described Andros: "You get the feeling you could come here, claim a coconut tree, and sit under it for the rest of your life."

Uncrowded Andros is the largest island in the Bahamas, yet is one of the least developed, least populated (only 8,000 people live on its 1,600 square miles) and least explored. Wander for miles along uninhabited beaches or trails and restock your mind for the frenzy of the outside world. No traffic jams; you can drive the length of the island without meeting another car.

Unspoiled San Andros on Andros Island is a rare jewel. Homesites have been cleared in stands of giant pine trees 70 feet high, where the "chickcharnies" (Bahamian elves) are said to cavort. Powder soft, white sand beaches and the blue azure waters of the ocean await you. Life is geared to the sun, and to your own pace.

Unbelievable Andros abounds in exotic flowers and foliage. It's one of the few islands that has its own supply of fresh water, which provides the island with a thriving agricultural business. The cliché "seeing is believing" applies to San Andros; even then you'll have difficulty realizing that you can own a homesite and enjoy the island's beautiful beaches at prices you can afford.

You could own a homesite in San Andros and enjoy its pleasures any time of year. No concrete jungles or traffic jams - just year-round comfort.

San Andros, with its own airport and resort hotel, is an incredibly beautiful garden spot where there are no property taxes, income taxes or sales taxes.

The "bone-fishing capital of the world", Andros is situated off the Tongue of the Ocean barrier reef - great for scuba diving and snorkeling. Swimming, deep sea-fishing, tennis, riding, sailing or merely exploring the quaint antiquity of this largest Bahamian island are all added features.

Right now, you can own a part of "paradise" at San Andros for as little as $4,995. If you're interested, come look it over. Send in the accompanying coupon and you may qualify for a four-day inspection/vacation.

At half the regular cost, maximum two persons, you can fly from Toronto to San Andros and return via Nassau. At San Andros you will receive free accommodation and meals for four days and three nights, and free recreational facilities.
