what ever their host nitrogen obtained from a well-grown clover, catch plant and you will find nodules clustered on the roots of the plants which we speak. Some inoculate clover seed with bacteria to set up this happy relation between plant and soil. The soil has been enriched for years there. No precaution being taken, the bacteria will be already there. It is one of the most expensive things you can purchase. There is no doubt easily seen that these bacteria like the clover plants are very beneficial but very difficult to have on the soil. Only a few kinds of bacteria are mentioned. There are many more. On the soil are bacteria which are very useful. Those we have mentioned you will never notice how the trees seem to die in the leaves wilt and the leaves become brown and die due to the action of bacteria beneath the bark and they die down to the trunk as they go.

The continuous battle being fought between these good and bad bacteria and while some of them are helpful creatures and do a great deal of good, we could not live without germ life.

beginning to look at the means whereby the pupils, thus making teaching much easier. Make use of every day something which enters the student in order to contain the material in the regular lessons. J. A. Rural Representative writes about an event which took place in Malton school where the teacher, Miss Holmes, introduced features from the old school life. The programme for the Day Celebration, was quite unique. On arrival a warm lunch, programme commenced with singing, recitations, plays and other vocal features, all accompanied by gramophone music. The rural Y. M. C. A. came and after I had seen the school, he took them out to introduce some features. The children were extremely interested in all the games after the affair was over. The school is still around Mr. Holmes' car actually pulled up to the school. Details of all kinds are in the paper. There is room for some of the rural schools, school games might

was concluded, and all work in the school was done. They were not only interested in the games but in the head-dress and in the very exemplary work. These were proposed and the children and visitors seemed to enter into the programme and everything went well. Miss Holmes' departure for this departure programme, especially in these children are not more progress, these new features. One of the trustees to this teacher school, he had been not wanting to since Miss Holmes it was difficult to home a day, on
