The Farmer's Corner.

Scrimp Farming.

Look at this farm; how wretchedly it is managed. It yields but a little of its power. The man does not get the strength out of the ground. If he put out all the labor and working capital he has on forty acres, taking at the same time a good agricultural paper, he would grow more and more comfortable every year; but by scattering them over one hundred and sixty acres he gets poorer and poorer. The earth is liberal to good treatment, but as it is of crops to poor farming, it is a half-starved cow to poor farming. There is nothing to which the proverb "Whatever is worth doing is worth doing well," can be more appropriately applied than to cultivating the soil, or raising stock. The same is true of the kitchen and the dairy. Whatever is done in either should be done well in order to health and profit. Good cooking will not only promote the health and the happiness of the family, but increase its capacity for labor. Butter carefully made and packed will bring a top price. Uniformity of color and quality in a tub or pail is essential, and this cannot be had if different churnings are packed together. We ought to raise the value of our butter yield at least twenty-five per cent. It is only the well-fed cow that fills the pail handsomely with rich milk, and it is only rich milk that makes good butter. When tubs are filled the market should be reached without delay. Do not hold your butter for six months or six days; turn it into cash. Butter consigned to commission houses in fall to hold for a rise, will probably be sold as grease next May.—N. Y. Witness.

Agricultural Education.

To farm profitably one must think correctly, and correct thought comes from reflection and training. It is the veriest fool to expect from the recent graduate a trained experience; but we should ask for a trained mind which can quickly receive the teachings of experience, and fit for profitable uses. We do not ask for our part, for our colleges to graduate practical farmers; we but ask that they graduate men educated to act from principles, and to think correctly, and in whom the charms of a country life and possibilities of a farming career have taken root. When farming, practical farming, has the sympathies of an educated class of men, there is everything to be hoped. When men trained to think, and whose thought is trained to take expression in action, enter upon the arena of a farming life, the possibilities of our soil and location are to become developed to an extent little realized. A class of educated farmers means greater opportunities for the common farmers whose education has been derived from toil and experience and the conflict of toils. It means better and more practical lectures, more useful agricultural societies, a higher toned agricultural press, the exclusion of dead-beats from agricultural influence, and a healthier tone in agriculture generally. Education brings self-respect, and self-respect draws to itself the respect of others. This is our agricultural politics in a nutshell.—Scientific Farmer.

The Virtues of Oatmeal.

In Great Britain children of all ranks are raised on oatmeal diet alone, because it causes them to grow strong and beautiful, and no better food can possibly be found for them. It is also quite as desirable for the student as for the laborer, and for the delicate lady as for her hard-working sister; indeed, all classes would be greatly benefited by its use, and dyspepsia, with all its manifold annoyances, can be kept at a distance. Oatmeal is more substantial food, it is said, than veal, pork or lamb, giving as much or more mental vigor, while its great desideratum consists in one's not becoming weary of it, for it is as welcome for breakfast or tea as is wheat Graham bread. It can be eaten with syrup and butter as a hearty pudding, with cream and sugar, like rice. It is especially good for young mothers, upon whose nervous forces too great a demand has been made, and they lose the equilibrium of the system and become depressed and dispirited. Oatmeal requires to be cooked slowly, and the water should be boiling hot when it is stirred in.

the liquid, well mixed, over the seed with a common watering-pot twelve hours before sowing. If seed-corn of any kind is thus treated, rooks will not touch it, for they, as well as other birds, appear to have a great dislike of the tar. The expense of crook-keepers is also by this plan avoided.

For the Little Folks.

Lulu's Complaint.

It's a poor little sorrowful baby,
For Bidget it was down stairs;
My titties have itched, my fingers,
And Dolly won't say her prayers.
I haven't seen my beautiful mamma
Since ever so long ago;
An' I ain't her funniest baby
No longer, for Bidget said so.
My ma's dot an' other new baby;
Don't dived it—He did—yes, erday,
An' it kites, it kites, oh, so defful,
I wis He would take it away.
I don't want no "sweet little sister"
I want my dot mamma, I do;
I want her to kiss me, an' tise me,
An' tell me her precious Lulu!
I ddes my bid para will b'lin me!
A little ddot titten some day.
Here's nurse wid my mamma's new baby,
I wis e would take it away.
Oh, oh, what tinnin' yed fingers!
It sees me yite out o' its eyes!
I ddes we will tite it, and dived it
Some tanny whenever it kites.
I ddes I will dived it my Dolly
To play wid moe every day;
And I ddes, I ddes—say, Bidget,
An' Dolly won't say her prayers.

Carl.

Carl was a little Norwegian boy, who, with his father and mother, lived in a pretty little cottage on the banks of a pleasant river.
He was a good boy, and always delighted in the Sunday-school, which he attended after he was three years old. When he was about six, he felt that he had given his whole heart to God, and from that time he was a remarkably happy, joyous child.
Returning from church one Sunday, his mother saw that he was very quiet and thoughtful, and asked him what was the trouble.
"O mother dear," he said, "Mr. B. talked so sweetly to-day about our heaven, I thought I shall want to go soon. I whispered to my Jesus and told Him I will be ready."
His mother was startled to hear her dear little boy talk as if he was going to leave her; but he was soon singing to himself, happy as ever, and she thought no more about it.
Not many days after, she gave him leave to go out with his sled, and the new-fallen snow. He kissed her "good-bye" as usual. When he had been gone longer than common, she inquired of his father, who was near the door, if he had seen little Carl. He had not, and they ran out calling him by name; but no Carl answered.
They traced the tiny foot-prints and the sled-tracks over the little hill behind the barn, and there they found his little body in a pool of water at the foot of the hill. It was quite stiff and cold. He had broken through the ice, fallen into the water with his little face downwards, and was drowned.
He was taken to the house, and kind friends did all that could be done to restore him; but little Carl had gone to his Jesus.
Dear children, remember you may be called, in a moment, while at your play. May you give your hearts to the dear Jesus, and every day whisper to Him to help you to be ready. And if you—
"Ask the Saviour to help you,
Comfort, strengthen, and keep you;
He is willing to aid you,
He will carry you through."
—Aunt Anne.

POWER OF A LITTLE CHILD.

Recently, two men engaged in an angry dispute on the street, during which one shook his fist beneath the other's nose, and appeared to have worked himself up to the fever heat of passion. Just then a little girl, almost an infant, who had been going by, but stopped apparently paralyzed by the man's fury, moved quite close to him, and looking up into his face, inquired,
"What make you so cross, mister?"
It was so unexpected that the man evidently felt a complete revolution of feeling. Gradually his countenance cleared and finally lit up with a smile, as he patted the little peace-maker's head and remarked, as he moved away, ignoring the other man altogether—
"I guess you're right, pet."

SOME NEW

GAMES FOR CHILDREN.

It is a fact that the long evenings are approaching, and it is advisable that the children should be provided with useful recreation. The following Games are both instructive and amusing, and are very fascinating.
The first two are quite an assistance to the School course, the first exercising the young in the correct spelling of words, and the second teaching them to count quickly and correctly.
"LOGOMACHE,
OR War of Words."
PRICE 60 CENTS.
This game is easily learned being accompanied by concise directions, and in short time not only the young folks, but also the old folks are equally interested in it.
"MYSTIC THIRTY-ONE,"
a companion game to the above.
PRICE 60 CENTS.
"What o'clock,
OR Old Father Time."
A first rate round game which is highly interesting and amusing. Price 60 cents. A few sets for sale at this office.
