(BY SIR WALTER SCOTT, BART.)

On the next morning the knight departed early, with the intention of making a long journey; the condition of his horse, which he had carefully spared during the preceding morning, being such as enabled him to travel far without the necessity of much repose. Yet his purpose was baffled by the devious paths through which he rode, so that when evening closed upon him he only found himself on the frontiers of the West Riding of York-To the People of the City of Fredericton shire. By this time both horse and the Public generally. and man required refreshment, and it became necessary, moreover, to look out for some place in which they might spend the night, which was now fast approaching.

The place where the traveller found himself seemed unpropitious for obtaining either shelter or refreshment, and he was likely to be reduced to the usual expedient of knight-errant, who, on such occasions turned their horses to graze, and laid themselves down to meditate on their lady mistress, with an oaktree for a canopy. But the Black Knight either had no mistress to meditate upon, or, being as indifferent in love as he seemed to be in war, was not sufficiently occupied by passionate reflections upon her beauty and cruelty, to be able to parry the effects of fatigue and hunger, and suffer love to act as a substitute for the solid comforts of a bed and supper. He felt dissatisfied, therefore, when, looking around, he found himself deeply involved in woods, through which indeed there were many open glades, and some paths, but such as seemed only formed by the numer-THE Subscriber begs leave to inform the public that he has now on hand a Complete Stock of Tinware, Japanned the forest, or by the animals of chase Ware, Pressed Ware, Granite Iron and the hunters who made prey of Ware, I ollow Ware, etc., which he will them.

The good steed, grievously fatigued with so long a day's journey under a rider cased in mail, had no sooner found, by the slackened reins, that he was abandoned to his own guidance, than he seemed to and Reliable Tailoring assume new strength and spirit; and whereas formerly he had scarce replied to the spur, otherwise than by a groan, he now, as if proud of the confidence reposed in him, pricked up his ears, and assumed of his own accord, a more lively motion. The path which the anirider abandoned himself to his discretion.

He was justified by the event; OVERCOATINGS and SUITINGS for the footpath soon after appeared a little wider and more worn, and the tinkle of a small bell gave the knight to understand that he was in the vicinity of some chapel or hermitage.

Accordingly, he soon reached an open flat of turf, on the opposite

Repairing executed the bottom of the rock, and leaning, as it were, against it, was constructed a rude hut, built chiefly LADIES' of the trunk of trees felled in the neighboring forests, and secured against the weather by having its crevices stuffed with moss mingled with clay. The stem of a young MADE OVER fir-tree lopped of its branches, with a piece of wood tied across near the top, was planted upright by the door, as a rude emblem of the holy cross. At a little distance on the right hand, a fountain of the purest water trickled out of the rock, and was received in a hollow stone, which labor had formed into a rustic basin. Escaping from thence, the stream murmured down the descent by a channel which its course had long worn, and so wan dered through the little plain to lose itself in the neighboring wood. (To be continued.)
