Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

A GREAT DRAWBACK.

Do you have to be right?
If you do, I have a deep sympathy for you.
For it is such a troublesome thing to have to be always right—it puts you in such hard corners, narrows your path so.

Take it in an argument. If you don't have to be right, you can consider what the other fellow is saying and learn something occasionally. But if you have to be right, you don't have a chance to learn anything because you are too intent on standing up for your side of the case.

A Miserable Little Loophole.

I heard a man of this sort arguing with another man the other night. The man who had to be right was caught fair and square in a denial of a previous statement. Of course, he couldn't admit that he had been wrong the first time, and so he crawled out of the most miserable little loop-hole by saying, "I didn't mean that, I meant such and such."

It was perfectly obvious to a third party that he hadn't meant anything of the sort. But, of course, there was no way of proving it. If he chose to be insincere for the sake of being right, no one could stop him. But one could have one's opinion of him.

She Didn't Want to Play Better Because—

Here's another case. "I hate to play cards with the P's," says an acquaintance, "because they are always talking over the hand afterwards and picking out mistakes."

"Don't you like to see where you could have done it differently?" I asked.

"No," she said, "I don't like to have everything I do found fault with."

I happen to know these people and I know that they are not more apt to find fault with her play than their own. They are just trying to learn to play better. But she isn't, because to play better she would have to admit that she makes mistakes, and she can't admit that—because she is always right!

She Thought She Must Have Learned Something in Forty Years.

"It seems to me," a woman of 60 said to me one day, "that there must be a few things I have learned in keeping house for 40 years that my daughter who has kept house one year, doesn't know."

"Well, aren't there?" I said.

"She never yet has accepted one of my suggestions," sighed the mother.

Evidently, it was more important to that daughter that she should be right than she should take advantage of 40 years of experience.

Remarkable Achievement for Purely Canadian Concern.

As evidence of the way in which one enterprising Canadian firm has pushed the sale of its product into the corners of the earth, it is interesting to know that the "Salada" Tea Company sell their product not only through the United States, but in France, Belgium, Spain, Portugal, Canary Islands, Algeria, Morocco, The Gold Coast, every British West India Island, Mexico, Cuba, British Honduras, the Guianas, Colombia, Venezuela, Brazil, Paraguay, Chile and the Argentine.

They have lately made a large shipment to Iceland, and have received inquiries from Egypt, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Turkey, Norway, Alsace, Switzerland, Peru, Denmark, Sweden, etc., etc.

The teas shipped to these countries are exactly the same quality as you buy under the same familiar labels in any part of Canada or the United States. The popularity of this tea during the past century has made "Salada" a household word in America.

Just Folks

TO A LITTLE GIRL.

Oh, little girl with eyes of brown
And smiles that fairly light the town,
I wonder if you really know
Just why it is we love you so.

And why—with all the little girls
With shining eyes and tangled curls
That throng and dance this big world through—
Our hearts have room for only you.

Since other little girls are gay
And laugh and sing and romp in play,
And all are beautiful to see,
Why should you mean so much to me?

Oh, there's a reason good for this,
You laughing, little bright-eyed miss!
In all this town, with all its girls,
With shining eyes and sun-kissed curls,

If we should search it through and through
We'd find not one so fair as you;
And none, however fair of face,
Within our hearts could take your place.

For one glad day not long ago,
God sent you down to us below
And said that you were out to keep,
To guard awake and watch asleep;

And ever since the day you came,
We've found that God gave us you,
We prize the little things you do,
Though God has filled this world

We like you best because you're ours—
In our our greatest joys we know,
And that is why we love you so.

Minard's Liment Co., Limited.

Dear Sirs,—Your traveler is here to-day and we are getting a large quantity of your MINARD'S LIMENT. We find it the best Liment on the market making no exception. We have been in business 13 years and have handled all kinds, but have dropped them all but yours; that sells itself; the others have to be pushed to get rid of.

SORDID TIMES.

We're so busy profiteering that we haven't time to read, and the publishers are fearing that their trade will go to seed. Everyone is talking prices, down so high they break the heart; and that sort of stuff puts noses to divert thoughts from Art. I would talk of books and writers when the evening shadows fall, but the cost-of-living blighters gather round and whoop and bawl. I would speak of good old Dante and Cost and throw a fit. I would grudge a soulful ballad from my trusty gramophone, but my people, sad and pallid, roast the profiteers and groan. When I'd take my lyre and play it, neighbors come and break the strings, and they cry, "Come off! Belay it! We would talk of solemn things." And their talk is all of robbers, and of this and that disgrace; and such hopeful souled Micawbers as myself are out of place. Oh, their talk is all of thieving and of guys who should be pinched, and they spend the gloaming grieving that no fellow has been lynched. I am tired of talking prices, I am tired of talking cost; and a word of that suffices to enwrap my soul in frost.
