In many cases readers were under the impression that they could not claim because the securities were held in the names of persons residing in this country. It has occurred to me that there may be others in a like position who they have no claim for repayment. I should like to point out to such persons that every British subject who received income which has suffered leduction of tax in this country may recover the whole or part thereof irrespective as to whether the securiies stand in their own names or not. By the last Finance Act the Income Tax was reduced from 6|- to 5|- in the £, and recipients of income from this country should take care that the tax is deducted at the lower rate in fu-
