A Serious Runaway Accident.

Sunday evening a party of four young men were driving in a Gladstone and carelessly went under the South London overhead railway bridge while a train was passing. The horses naturally took fright and dashed away, upsetting the vehicle and throwing the occupants out. Ed. Webb, of 322 York street, sustained a fracture of the shoulder. Charlie Saunders, of 567 King street, was seriously injured, and another had his thumb broken. The horses were caught, but not before the rig was badly damaged.
