The House of Commons reassembles at Ottawa tomorrow after the Easter new provinces in the Northwest will Japanese.

There seems no good reason why this debate should not speedily be brought to a close. For three weeks past the speechifying has been proceeding in a listless fashion. The orators have held forth to practically empty benches, and the newspaper correspondents have largely ignored the

The legitimate discussion of public questions would not suffer, and there would be an immense saying of time and money, if some arrangement could be come to whereby, after the leaders on the respective sides have spoken, it could be left optional to a speechifier to simply hand in to the official reporters his written address on the sub-

Nothing is to be gained by either the Government or the Opposition, in this, the first session of a new parliament, by the undue prolongation of the session. Parliament has been sitting since January, and the members, with very few exceptions, are not anxious to sit away into the summer, depriving themselves, as they have done in all recent sessions, of the reasonable recreation which the summer brings to jaded humanity.

To business, gentlemen! The public are tired of dull and uninteresting talk and meaningless grumbling. Vote your supplies, pass the necessary measures, and then give the country a rest from political turmoil.

Soon Self-Condemned.

Premier Whitney, in the recent apology for his failure to put pre-election promises into practice, said that "he and his friends professed to have no more public virtue than their neighbors." That may be the position which Mr. Whitney desires now to take up, but it was not the attitude assumed by him and his friends prior to election day. Then, as the public will well remember, Mr. Whitney and his associates professed to have a great deal more public virtue than their neighbors, and asked to be given the control of public affairs almost solely on that remind Mr. Whitney of this fact.

There is no intention, they tell us now, to abolish the position of Minister of Education, or to do away with the officers in the Forestry Department. And as for the control of the liquor traffic, Mr. Whitney is not putting it in the hands of the men designated by him when in Opposition, but is making it the strongest possible political system, the commissioners in very many cases being not ordinary members of the Conservative party, but active officers of Conservative associations, while, as in London, inspectors who have done The peach-growers say that a look at their duty faithfully, and against whom their trees convinces them that there no accusation of incapacity or parti- will be a big crop this year. sanship can successfully be laid, are being dismissed, in order that the veriest political hacks may be provided

It is now said that there would have been no alliance between Great Britain and Japan but for a series of inexcusable blunders by Russia some five ears ago-the result of the extraordinary haste with which the Czar's advisers in high places proceeded to liamentary life would be much more undertake the subjugation of Manwhen the discussion on the churia, without reference to the feelsecond reading of the bills to form two lings of either the British or the

That may have been the case. What is now important and may, under certain conditions, be a momentous factor in the future conduct of the war between Japan and Russia, is the nature of the Anglo-Japanese alliance, The danger of an accentuation of the trouble which has arisen through the too close hugging of the shores of the French possession in the east by the is loaded." Russian warships is very great, unless the wisest counsels are permitted to prevail in both Russia and France. The Jap is keenly observant. His intelligence department in the present war has been shown to be exceedingly well organized. And the conduct of the commander of the Russian warships in their progress eastward has not been such as to help the other belligerent to have a very high regard for the benevolence of French neutrality. The Japanese have noted that Rojestvensky's fleet has skirted the possession of almost every European power, and of powers not European as States Congress, adopted by members well, and have been freely given in self-protection, it having been those facilities for rest and refreshment which the law of nations permits and nothing more. Without these evidences of good which there is Scriptural condemna- faith, we can easily understand the feeling of Japan at the present crisis in the East. For a neutral nation to voluntarily supply a belligerent with a base from which to procure all needed supplies for days at a time would be tantamount to an act of war, and that act, if proved in the case of France, would enable Japan to say that she was really fighting both Russia and France -the latter under cover of avowed friendly neutrality. In that case, under he Anglo-Japanese agreement of five ears ago, Japan might consider herself entitled to call upon Great Britain o come to her aid, and who knows where the entanglements would end? to be said. Great Britain has, therefore, a very keen interest in the present charges of bad faith made by Japan against France, which may become a menace to the cordial relations subsisting between Britain and France, unless cleared up to the satisfaction of Japan. Supposing the Japanese fleet were to worsted in the first bout with Rojestvensky, and it were clearly established that this victory was scored largely because of the aid given, prior o the mighty death struggle, by the French colonists in Indo-China-"for a onsideration"-Japan, fighting for her very life, might deem it to be her only chance to call upon her ally to come to her aid. It might be a stretch to say that such aid by French colonists constituted an act of war, within the neaning of the treaty between Britain and Japan; nevertheless, the very fact that it was so held by Japan, that ground. It is cruel of Mr. Graham and act, if not disavowed, would prove an other members of the Legislature to awkward appeal for the motherland to neet. Protest Against Use of Mineral Substances in Dress Material.

London, April 21. - At least 50 per cent of the cheaper forms of hesiery contain very distinct quantities of arsenic, the amount rising in some cases o as much as half a grain per pair of stockings. This is the result of a series of tests made by the analyst for Nottingham Mr. S. R. Trotman, M.A., F.I.C. The arsenic is due to (1) the use of materials for finishing and dyeing, which are themselves contaminated, and (2) the "stoving" of the yarns with impure forms of sulphur.

In quoting these results the Lance objects strongly to the practice of loading dress materials with mineral sub-

Thus compounds of zinc, tin and aluminum are used, which, dissolved in perspiration, would, we have little doubt form corrosive salts. "Although not highly soluble, this ar-

Increasing Among Women, But Sufferers Need Not Despair

THE BEST ADVICE IS FREE

Of all the diseases known, with which the female organism is afflicted, kidney disease is the most fatal, and statistics show that this disease is on the increase among women.

Unless early and correct treatment is applied the patient seldom survives when once the disease is fastened upon her. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the most efficient treatment for kidney troubles of women, and is the only medicine especially prepared for this purpose. When a woman is troubled with pain or weight in loins, backache, frequent. painful or scalding urination, swelling of limbs or feet, swelling under the eyes, an uneasy, tired feeling in the region of the kidneys or notices a brickdust sediment in the urine, she should lose no time in commencing treatment with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it may be the means of saving her life. For proof, read what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs.

Sawyer.

"I cannot express the terrible suffering I had to endure. A derangement of the female organs developed nervous prostration and a serious kidney trouble. The doctor attended me for a year, but I kept getting worse, until I was unable to do anything, and I made up my mind I could not live. I finally decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a last resort, and I am to-day a well woman. I cannot praise it too highly, and I tell every suffering woman about my case."

THE TELEGRAPH'S TRIUMPH

Set Going an Emigration Scheme That Government Might Copy.

London, April 24.—A great daily newspaper has rarely had greater cause for pride than the Daily Telegraph had last week in sending off its large party of emigrants from the east end of London to Canada. When the distress was at its worst in December last in West Ham the further notice. wost in December last in West Ham, the Daily Telegraph started a shilling fund which in a few weeks reached £15,000. About one-third was spent in immediate relief, and the bulk of £10,000 has since been spent in fitting out close on a thousand working folk and sending them to cluded. To leave Toronto early in July Canada. The great newspaper has thus given a good lead to the Government, and that the public are willing ion any other party before consulting and eager to help in a big scheme of emigration as the best and most permanent means of checking the spread of poverty in our congested districts. The party of emigrants entertained by the Daily Telegraph on the night of their departure proved by their respectable apearance how well and how wisely the West Ham fund has been spent.
