KRAFT CHEESE

Did His Best.

The village magistrate was examining the victim of a motor car accident. "You say you didn't see his number," he remarked. "You swear to the man?"

"Well," said the witness, "I did, but I don't think he heard me."

Quiet and Modest.

"Is that all the work you can do in one day?" asked Sam's dissatisfied employer.

"Well, boss," replied Sam, "I suppose I could do more, but I never was much of a hand for showin' off."

CAPTAIN BLOOD

kept me aboard as an added hostage for his obedience to my wishes."

Blood's vivid eyes looked into the other's that were clear and honest, and he smiled, a little wistfully. A moment he seemed to hesitate.

"Way shouldn't I tell you? It's the same reason that's been urging me to pick a quarrel with you so that I might have the satisfaction of slapping a couple of feet of steel into your vitals. When I accepted your commission, I was moved to think it might redeem me in the eyes of Miss Bishop—for whose sake, as you have guessed, I took it. But I have discovered that such a thing is beyond accomplishment. I should have known it for a sick man's dream. I have discovered also that if she's choosing you, as I believe she is, she's choosing wisely between us, and that's why I'll not have your life risked by keeping you aboard whilst the message goes by another who might bungle it. And now perhaps you'll understand."

"And you tell me this?"

"Oh, plague on it!—so that ye may tell her: so that she may be made to realize that there's something of the unfortunate gentleman left under the chief and pirate sea accounts me, and that her own good is my supreme desire. Knowing that, she may—faith, she may remember me more kindly. If it's only in her prayers. That's all, my lord."

Lord Julian held out his hand. "I wonder whether you are right," said his lordship, "and whether you are not the better man."

"Where she is concerned see that you make sure that I am right. Go!—bye to you."

The Arabella sailed, within the hour, moving fast, before a sluggish breeze. The fort remained silent and there was no movement from the fleet to hinder her departure.

CHAPTER XXI

WAR

Five miles out to sea from Port Royal, whence the details of the coast of Jamaica were losing their sharpness, the Arabella hove to, and the sleep she had been towing was warped alongside.

Captain Blood escorted his compulsory guest to the head of the ladder. Colonel Bishop breathed freely at last.

"A safe home to you, Colonel darling," said he in valdication, and from his easy, smiling manner you would never have dreamt of the pain he carried in his breast.

On the mole at Port Royal, under the low, embattled wall of the fort, Major Mallard and Lord Julian waited to receive him, and it was with infinite relief that they assisted him from the ship.

"Anyhow, it's not for long," growled the Colonel, finding speech at last. "No, by—"

He had emphasized the assurance by an unprintable oath. "If I spend the last shilling of my fortune and the last ship of the Jamaica fleet, I'll have that rascal in a hempen necktie before I rest!"

He had emphasized the assurance by an unprintable oath. "If I spend the last shilling of my fortune and the last ship of the Jamaica fleet, I'll have that rascal in a hempen necktie before I rest!"

They went off together, skirting the redoubt, and so through court-yard and garden to the house where Arabella waited anxiously. The sight of her uncle brought her infinite relief, not only of his own account, but on account of Captain Blood.

"You took a great risk, sir," she gravely told Lord Julian after the ordinary greetings had been exchanged. But Lord Julian answered her as he had answered Major Mallard. "There was no risk, ma'am. So that Blood's ship were allowed to pass the" fort, no harm could come to Colonel Blood. Blood pledged me his word for that."

Very early next morning, before the heat of the day came to render the open intolerable to his lordship, he hurried forth to join her. He explained himself by the announcement that he bore her a message from Captain Blood.

"He desired me," he said at last, "to give you a message that should prove to you that there is still some thing left in him of the unfortunate gentleman that—that—for which once you knew him. It is not easy, Stab me, it is not. He was a man who deserved well. And amongst us we have marred his chances; your uncle, because he could not forget his rancour; you because—"

Because, having told him that in the King's service he would find his redemption of what was past, you would not afterwards admit to him that he was the chief motive of his embracing that same service."

"She had turned her shoulder to him so that he should not see her face. His lordship's unusual nervousness was steadily increasing. "He thought, then—so he told me—that my presence here had contributed to his inability to redeem himself in your sight; and unless he was redeemed, then was redemption nothing."

"He thought that you had contributed?" she echoed.

"Aye, and he said so in terms which told me something that I hope above all things, and yet dare not believe, for God knows, I am no coxcomb Arabella. He said—I had gone aboard his ship to demand the instant surrender of your uncle. He laughed at me. Colonel Bishop should be a hostage for his safety. By rashly venturing aboard his ship, I afforded him in my own person yet another hostage as valuable at least as Colonel Bishop. Yet he bade me depart; not from the fear of consequences, for he is about four not from any personal esteem for me whom he confessed that he had come to find detestable; and this for the very reason that made him concerned for my safety."

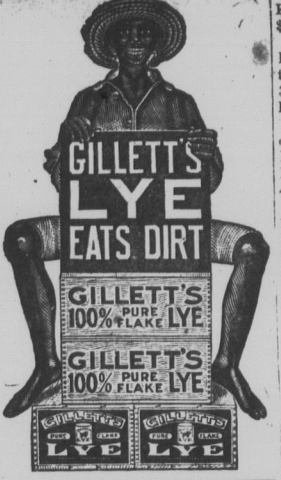

"I do not understand," she said, as he paused. "Is not that a contradiction in itself?"

"It seems so only. The fact is, Arabella, this unfortunate man has the temerity to love you."

She cried out at that, and clutched his arm. "You say that calmly and disturbedly. Go on," she bade him.

"Well, then; he saw in me one who made it impossible that he should win you—so he said. Therefore he could with satisfaction have killed me. But because my death might cause you pain, because your happiness was the thing he desired, he surrendered that part of his guarantee of safety which my person afforded him. If his departure should be hindered and I should lose my life in what might follow, there was the risk that that you might mourn me. Because of that he bade me leave his ship, and had me put ashore." She looked at him with eyes that were swimming with tears. "Was he right?" Arabella? My life's happiness hangs upon your answer."

W. H. WILLETT, Secretary-Treasurer.

The Agricultural Society of Bonaventure Co. Division B is in the road of rapid success.

Each year shows a sensible amelioration, and as to the seed chapter it is not premature to say that before long all the members of the society will sow but minutely selected seed; and the advantage of this work are known. We must praise in this the effective work of the directors and the facilities that the Societies have to develop when they wish to go forward.

I cannot let the occasion pass without saying publicly a word of thanks to the mayor of New Richmond, M. Sinclair McCollm and Mrs. McCollm for an excellent dinner they served to the judges of the Fair, to the directors of the society and every one who wished to join them.

Mr. McCollm apart from being mayor is a devoted member of the Agricultural Society and a model farmer. He never lacks behind when the word "progress" is mentioned.

Heal It With Zam-Buk

To dress any Cut, Bruise, Burn, Scald, or Scratch with Zam-Buk means that pain is soothed away that injured skin is instantly protected against poisonous germs—that natural healing is hastened.

Even wounds that have taken "bad ways," and obstinate cases of Eczema, Psoriasis, Ulcers, Ringworm and Piles, are all successfully treated by this wonderful herbal balm.

WATER TROUBLES

Mothers especially like it for their children as it takes the place of internal medicines.

Local Druggists Have Modern Remedy for Colds

A Vaporizing Salve which is Puffed Over Throat and Chest for Colds.

When Vicks Vaporub, the "external" method of treating sore throat, bronchitis, deep chest colds, or croup, is applied over throat or chest, the ingredients are released as vapors by the body heat.

These vapors, filled with each breath carry the medication directly to the affected air passages, loosening the phlegm and relieving the congestion. At the same time Vicks acts as a counter-irritant, stimulating the skin, and thus helps the vapors inhaled to break up the inflammation.

Colds are usually relieved over night.
