May Promise of Good Things to Come

What is so rare as a day in May,
When blossoms fill the air?
The gentle breeze wafts through the trees
A perfume rich and rare.

Were ever seen such shades of green?
Was ever sky so blue?
Were ever notes from feathered throats
More sweetly sung or true?

Was ever love quite so bright
To cheer our way?
Or love or life half so dear
As love and life in May?

—T. A. Edmund.
