ABOUT BOOKS.

"Devoutly read, and then all books shall justify thee."—Wisdom of the Brahmists.

"The love of reading enables a man to exchange the wearisome hours of life, which come to every one, for hours of delight."—Montesquieu.

"Whatever book thou readest, suffer not thy mind to be influenced by the character of the writer, whether his literary attainments be great or small; but let thy only motive be, the pure love of truth. Do not ask who said this or that, but attend closely to what is said."—Thomas a Kempis.

"Books make us the 'citizens of every country, and the contemporary of every age.'"—Quoted by Thomas Brown.

"A literary man, whose library was destroyed by fire, has been deservedly admired for saying, 'I should have profited but little by my books if they had not taught me how to bear the loss of them.'"

"God be thanked for books! They are the voices of the distant and the dead, and make us heirs of the spiritual life of past ages. Books are the true levellers; they give, to all who will faithfully use them, the society, the spiritual presence, of the best and greatest of our race."—Channing's Self Culture.

"I converse only with myself and books. Honest and guileless life! Sweet and honourable repose, more, perhaps, to be desired than any kind of employment."—John Milton.

"Where there is no recreation or business for thee abroad, thou may'st have a company of honest old fellows in thy study which will find thee excellent diversion at home."—Old Dr. Fuller.

"A taste for books is the pleasure and glory of my life; I would not exchange it for the wealth of all the Indies."—Gibbon.
